British union expels 600

LONDON (AP) — Union leaders angered by a rebellion against Britain's 54-day-old national steel strike expelled 600 members Monday. Another 3,000 union rebels dealt the strike a severe setback by returning to work at two of Britain's biggest privately-owned steel companies.

Leaders of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation revoked union membership for employees of the privately-owned Sheerness Steel company because they had refused to join the job action. The plant, on England's southeastern coast near London, has continued to operate during the wage dispute despite picketing.

"We are very concerned about the position at Sheerness," said union General-Secretary Bill Sirs in announcing the expulsions. He told reporters the members were thrown out of the union for trying to persuade other workers at private steel mills to disobey the strike call.

The 3,000 union members who broke strike ranks Monday work at Hadfields in Sheffield, a major northern England steel town, and Round Oak in the Midlands.

50-seat test for parties gains ear of Trudeau

Broadbent . . .ineffective in West

OTTAWA (UPC) — NDP leader Ed Broadbent proposed a partial system of proportional representation Monday to add 50 members to the House of Commons and give political parties representatives in areas where they were all but shut out in last week's general election.

Broadbent suggested the plan be tried as an experiment during the current Parliament, and said it could be extended to add 100 extra members to the House in the future.

THE NDP leader put the proposal to Prime Minister Joe Clark and Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau late last week. He said Trudeau reacted "quite sympathetically," but Clark rejected it.

However, senior Liberal aides said the idea had been rejected by the party. "It is going to be business as usual," one aide said.

Last Monday, the Liberals won only two seats west of Ontario, the Conservatives elected only one member in Quebec and the NDP was shut out east of Ontario.

"THERE IS now no one party representing all areas of the country," Broadbent said, "and during the next several years, there will be serious politicial consequences when the Liberal government makes crucial decisions and there is ineffective representation from Western Canada."

Under Broadbent's scheme, outlined at his first news conference since the election, each party would submit a list of candidates for the seats available through proportional representation. There would be separate lists for each of five economic areas with a total of 10 seats each—Atlantic Canada, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia.

A PARTY drawing 40 per cent of the popular vote in a region would gain four of the region's 10 proportional representation seats. A party winning 20 per cent of the popular vote, generally not enough to elect any members in ridings, would win two seats in a region under Broadbent's plan.

The NDP prepared a table showing what the results would have been on last weeks' election results had 50 prop-rep seats been added.

THE LIBERALS would have picked up five seats in a combined B.C.-Prairies region, four in Ontario, seven in Quebec and four in Atlantic Canada.

The Conservatives would gave gained nine in B.C. and the Prairies, four in Ontario, two in Quebec and four in the Atlantic; the NDP six in B.C. and the Prairies, three in Ontario, one in Quebec and two in the Atlantic.

That adds up to a total of 51 seats. Broadbent said the discrepancy resulted from rounding off the figures; in practice, the total would be 50.

Broadbent met privately for more than an hour with Trudeau Friday, and said Monday that the Liberal leader treated his proposal "quite sympathetically."

HE HOPED that Clark would change his mind after consulting his caucus.

The 50 special MPs would attend committee meetings, participate in debates, vote in the House, and receive the basic $44,000-a-year salary—but they would not represent constituents.

Equal pay settlement a landmark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Human Rights Commission announced Monday a landmark settlement with the federal government that increases the wages of six female penitentiary nurses to match higher pay received by their male colleagues.

Under the settlement, three women employed at the Springhill penitentiary in Nova Scotia and three at the Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick get wage increases that put them on a par with male health technicians who have been doing the same work but getting higher pay since the early 70s.

The six women also get almost two years' back pay to make up for the difference dating to April, 1978, when their union first sought equal pay for them.

In addition, treasury board—the federal government's payroll department—has agreed to review salary differences among health workers in other penitentiaries and to adjust them if they exist as a result of sexual discrmination.

Rita Cadieux, deputy chief commissioner of the human rights commission, described the settlement as a precedent that should stimulate complaints from other unfairly-paid women and smooth the way for eventual equality in wage payments by the federal government and employers under federal jurisdiction.

"For us it's important because we have made the act work once and can make it work many other times," said Cadieux, referring to the Human Rights Act which prohibits federal employers from paying people different wages if they are doing work of equal value.

Leona Mollis, the 37-year-old nurse at Springhill who lodged the complaint about the pay scales, is barely satisfied with the settlement and regards it as just the tip of an iceberg.

"It's not a huge victory although it's about what we expected," she said in a telephone interview.

"They owe us a lot more if you want my honest opinion."

Mollis is at the top of the wage scale so she will get $1,054.29 in a lump sum for back pay and her annual salary will rise to the top male rate of $17,298 from the top female rate of $16,300.

Nurses at the minimum rate will get a lump sun of $2,112.28 to close the gap between the minimum sale rate of $16,141 and the minimum female rate of $14,286.

The male and female groups each are represented

AGENTS SUFFER

Motorists shocked at rate hike

Second of three parts

by RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

Not that the increases—ranging up to $50—weren't forecast, but it sometimes takes personal experience before the message gets through.

Friday is the deadline for Autoplan insurance renewal for most of the 1.7 million drivers in the province and insurance agents are bearing the brunt of complaints and long faces over the size of the premiums.

The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, which is trying to cast itself as the friendly monopoly, gave plenty of warning that rates in Victoria would be higher this year.

ICBC's president and chief executive officer, Robbie Sherrell, made special trips to Victoria late last year for press conferences to break the bad news.

It all has to do with its F.A.I.R. scheme (fundamental auto insurance rating) which equalizes rates around the province, removes discrimination on the grounds of sex and marital status, and generally gives the male driver under 25 a better deal.

Previously, Victoria drivers had the lowest premium rating in the province and paid on average $170 for their policies as against the B.C. average of $225. But removal of geographic factors alone means another $19 on the bill this year.

And that's not all.

There is bad news for owners of foreign imports and auto owners who use their vehicle for business purposes.

Most imported vehicles have been upped a group rating because of the expense of spare parts and the instability of the Canadian dollar. Whichever way you look at it, the end result is a bigger premium.

However, owners of some North American models, particularly older models previously clobbered by a high rate group, have dropped a rating and won't have to pay quite as much this year.

Business vehicle operators will also have to pay more this time round.

Chris Burke, manager of McTavish Insurance, provided the following examples of just how much more motorists can expect to pay in 1980.

Western Grits sounded out

The two Liberal MPs elected in Western Canada—both from Manitoba—have sounded out their party's views in B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan to discuss Western representation in the new federal cabinet.

In Edmonton, Alberta Liberals met Lloyd Axworthy, elected in Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

One of the questions was expected to be the possibility of appointing an Alberta Liberal senator to the cabinet.

Axworthy is on a fact-finding trip to assess ways of ensuring the federal government is aware of the Western point of view.

Robert Bockstael, the other elected Western Liberal who represents St. Boniface, met the 14 defeated Saskatchewan Liberal candidates earlier Monday in Regina.

A spokesman said the course Trudeau apparently favored on the advice of former Liberal transport minister Otto Lang would involve asking some Quebec MPs to resign so defeated Western candidates could run in byelections in their ridings.

Tony Merchant, Liberal candidate in Regina East, said if that course was followed, the most likely Saskatchewan candidate to be selected would be Ralph Goodale, who was narrowly defeated in Assiniboia.

A second course that candidates were told Trudeau also favors is the appointment of Pierre Deniger, MP for the Quebec riding of Laprairie, as grains minister. Merchant said Saskatchewan candidates oppose the

UN probers meet jurists

United Press International

The UN commission of inquiry met twice with Iranian jurists Monday, and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered a meeting be set up at once between the panel and Iranians allegedly crippled by the ousted shah's secret police.

But Khomeini, viewed by diplomats as the ultimate key to the release of the Americans hostages, said nothing about a meeting between the five-man panel and the 50 Americans who have been held captive at the U.S. embassy for 114 days.

In a statement issued from his office Monday night and reported by Tehran radio monitored in London, Khomeini announced he had instructed the revolution council and the Iranian foreign ministry to arrange "without delay" a meeting between the UN commission and "invalids of the Islamic revolution".

Khomeini, who with his statement injected himself into the work of the commission for the first time, said such a meeting would make the shah's and America's crimes clearer.

He did not spell out what he meant by "invalids," but his statement came at the same time as reports that the UN panel might give a hearing Tuesday to victims of the SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

Despite the hard-line statements of recent days, state department spokesman Hodding Carter cautioned against putting too much weight on any single statement coming from Iranian officials.

"I would remind you that we have seen days when official statements have covered 360 degrees," he said.

His comments indicated the Jimmy Carter administration has not abandoned hopes that the commission of inquiry visiting Iran will eventually lead to the hostages' release.

Hodding Carter would not directly comment on a statement by Khomeini saying there could be no release of the hostages until at least after the election of the Iranian parliament in April.

Soviet tanks roam Kabul

United Press International

● U.S. cool about Brezhnev speech. Page 2

Soviet commanders sent tanks through riot-torn and strike-stilled Kabul Monday and a high Afghan diplomat who defected said there was no functioning Afghan government because the Soviets were running every facet of the regime.

Reports in Washington and by well-informed travellers said 500 to 700 Afghanis were killed in four days of anti-Soviet protests.

"I can hardly say there is a national government in Afghanistan," said Rahin Gaporizi, 34, who stunned the diplomatic world Friday when he quit his post at the UN Afghan mission. He made the comment Monday night on the Public Television MacNeil-Lehrer report in New York.

Gaporizi, hinting strongly that he feared for his wife and children still in Afghanistan, would not directly say the Soviets had total control of the government.

But Gaporizi, who talked earlier this month with Soviet foreign policy planners in Moscow, stressed: "I can hardly believe that there is a national government . . . in which Afghans are having the power and the administration of the country."

In Kabul, despite the presence of Soviet tanks and repeated calls by the Kremlin-run Afghan government, shopkeepers kept their doors closed for the fifth straight day, the U.S. state department said.

Soviet armored power enforced a tense calm on riot-torn Kabul Monday but repeated calls by the Afghan government failed to convince merchants who had joined a general strike to reopen their stores.

More than 500 persons were killed in anti-Soviet protests that rocked the ancient capital from Thursday until Sunday, according to one reliable Western traveller who arrived in New Delhi, India, from Kabul and asked not to be identified.

"I've heard from the Afghans that there are 500 dead," he said. "But I'm sure it's more. They said there were thousands wounded. Their estimates are probably 80 per cent correct."

In Washington, the state department said casualties had climbed higher than the previously estimated 500 to 700 people killed or wounded.

Quebec issue 'threat'

MONTREAL (UPC) — The current "referendum rage" in Canada is a divisive process that threatens the entire principle of responsible parliamentary democracy, New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield said Monday.

"The referendum is a temptation, a shelter, for political leaders not prepared to make difficult decisions and be held accountable for them," the Conservative premier of Canada's only officially bilingual province told the Canadian Club.

"A referendum is a lure to the political leader more adept at political strategy than political leadership," Hatfield said, adding that Quebec Premier Rene Levesque was a "prime example" of that type of leader.

"Levesque has already said if he doesn't get a 'yes' (in Quebec's forthcoming independence referendum) that he will lose interest in the whole business."

Hatfield, who has a history of urging the rest of Canada to be more understanding of Quebec's special problems in the nation, said Levesque was being overly optimistic about what the province could achieve after independence.

The premier told reporters he was impressed with the policies of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan because they indicated readiness to negotiate instead of taking take-it-or-leave positions on constitutional issues.

idea because it would mean a Quebec cabinet minister would be responsible for the West's most important industry—grain.

The other options are appointment of Western senators to the cabinet and the establishment of Western branches of the prime minister's office. Such branches would provide an indirect means of getting Western views to Ottawa.

In Vancouver on Sunday, Axworthy said he could not understand why British Columbians voted heavily for the NDP.

"They can talk a lot but they can't get much action and it really doesn't make much sense," he said.

The NDP took 12 seats in the province, a gain of four from the May election, and the Progressive Conservatives took the other 16.

Axworthy said his presence on the West Coast with Bockstael "demonstrates we are concerned about the problems" of Western representation in the government.

Trudeau has also discussed representation of Western interests in the new federal Liberal government with former Crowfoot MP Jack Horner.

But Horner said in Red Deer, Alta., Monday he was "not overly sympathetic" towards Western voters.

"They knew what was going to happen (in the Feb. 18 election) and now the media are crying the blues," he said.

HEATHROW LIMPS

LONDON (Reuter) — Restaurants and snack bars at one of the busiest terminals in Heathrow airport near London were closed Monday for four days after a canteen worker was found to have typhoid, British health officials said.

A spokesman said that in the first half of February those who ate or drank at Terminal One, which handles short-haul European flights, was being asked to contact a doctor.

different unions, the Public Service Alliance of Canada and the Professional Institute of the Public Service, respectively.

The women are negotiating a new collective agreement and a treasury board spokesman said that whatever the outcome of negotiations, they would end up earning as least as much as the men.

Mollis suggested the women were entitled to higher wages than the men because they were professionally-trained and qualified nurses while the men were not. The men are health care officers—technicians for short.

The distinction goes to the nub of the equal pay issue. Cadieux said that on paper the men and women had different titles and different job descriptions but human rights investigators discovered they worked side by side and performed the same tasks.

"The only differences were that the nurses were better qualified and the men were better paid," said the commission paper explaining the lengthy procedure that led to the settlement.

The commission currently is investigating about 12 other complaints of unequal pay practices, five of them in the federally-regulated private sector and the rest in the civil service.

In a spinoff from the Atlantic penitentiary settlement, treasury board has agreed to look at wages paid health care workers at other penitentiaries.

Claude Bernier, the commission's compensation expert, said the same type of discrimination might exist at penitentiaries in Montreal and in Prince Albert, Sask., but at first glance it did not appear to exist elsewhere.

Gordon Fairweather, chief human rights commissioner, began saying publicly that a landmark equal-pay decision was in the works last November. He said it would have a profound affect on wage practices in the civil service and private industry.

The commission will not make public the details of other equal pay cases it is investigating, but two are on the public record. In one case, civil service librarians—mostly women—have complained they are paid less than historical researchers—mostly men—even though the librarians say the demands of the two jobs are the same.

In another case, a commission tribunal is trying to decide whether the commission has jurisdiction over a complaint by female bank note workers who receive lower wages than male janitors in the same establishment.

Roughriders sign three

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League announced today the signing of two veterans and rookie wide receiver.

Returning are centre Bob Poley, 24, in his third year with the Roughriders, and defensive tackle Mike Samples, 29, who joined Saskatchewan in 1978 in a trade with Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

U.S. cool on Soviet 'sign'

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States has been in direct touch with Moscow on Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's call for an end to foreign meddling in Afghanistan but has not been encouraged by what it has learned, U.S. officials said Monday.

State department sources said clarification had been sought at a senior level, presumably by U.S. ambassador Thomas Watson, on what some Western officials interpreted as a signal from Brezhnev last Friday that he might support neutralization for Afghanistan.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Brezhnev speech, made in Moscow, still is under study. "Our analysis is that it hasn't advanced the situation very far."

Other officials said the Kremlin has not actively encouraged speculation that Brezhnev was indicating readiness to participate in an international conference or to draft a guaranteed neutrality plan for Afghanistan similar to that in Austria.

Brezhnev said he was ready to "commence the withdrawal of our troops as soon as all forms of outside interference . . . are fully terminated."

He added: "Let the United States together with the neighbors of Afghanistan guarantee this, and then the need for Soviet assistance will cease."

President Carter has called for withdrawal of the Soviet troops which entered Afghanistan last December, to be followed by creation of a neutral government in Kabul. West European common market foreign ministers made a similar proposal last week.

Soviet officials have refused to elaborate on Brezhnev's speech. One U.S. official said Soviet officials had said Brezhnev's words speak for themselves.

"They're (Kremlin officials) not falling all over themselves with winks and nudges" intended to signal more far-reaching intentions, he added.

The official said some of his state department colleagues consider the speech a backward step since it appears to demand a U.S. admission of meddling in Afghan affairs.

U.S. officials said Washington has not ruled out the idea of an international conference on Afghan neutrality but feels the initiative for any such meeting should come from countries in the region such as Pakistan, not from the West.

Otherwise, they said, it could be seen as another effort by the big powers to create spheres of influence for themselves.

ROYAL TRUST GUIDES YOU AROUND THE BUMPS.

We show you mistakes to watch out for.

Everyone agrees that RRSP's are one of the very best ways to increase retirement income and reduce current income taxes. But not everyone knows about the little RRSP mistakes that can reduce that income.

We do. Here are some of the more obvious ones. Our free booklet will help you understand more about RRSP's and how they work.

Steer clear of places that don't offer a full range of plans.

There are different kinds of RRSP's, providing various combinations of security, interest earnings and flexibility. Royal Trust offers a unique range of six plans. Our booklet and good advice will give you a clear picture of how your choice of plans today will benefit you at retirement, or even in a few years' time.

Dodge the misuse of cash. Borrowing your RRSP money may be the wiser way.

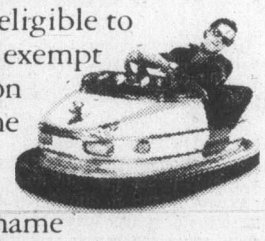
Say you have money set aside for your RRSP, yet at the same time, you're planning a loan for some other major purchase. That could be a mistake...you may be wiser to use your cash for that purchase, and borrow the money for your RRSP.

You see, Royal Trust offers Tax Saver Loans for RRSP's, and they have one big advantage: Interest payments on Tax Saver Loans (except for loans taken for spousal RRSP's) are tax deductible in the year they're paid...so tax savings can offset a portion of your interest costs. In short, you could be well ahead.

Don't dent your retirement income by putting all your deposits in your own RRSP, when maybe you should contribute to a plan in the name of your spouse.

This can often earn you the same tax advantages today while gaining you some very valuable future tax savings when the retirement income is received.

For instance, if you both have plans, then you'll both be eligible to receive the first $1,000 tax exempt each year when you draw on them for retirement income after age 65. Further, it often makes sense to build retirement income in the name of the person expecting the lower marginal tax rate after retirement.



Pick up this free booklet at any of our branches.

Find out how a Royal Trust RRSP can take the bumps out of your road to richer retirement savings.

Inflation at home rivals Iran as U.S. crisis

WASHINGTON (CP) — While President Carter concentrates on the crisis in Iran, a long-simmering domestic problem—inflation—appears to be approaching crisis proportions.

Signs of an impending crisis were clear in 1979 as the consumer price index rose over-all by 13.3 per cent—the highest increase in 33 years.

But the news from January sent a new tremor through the economy: Consumer prices that month rose 1.4 per cent, a leap that, if carried through the rest of the year, would translate into an inflation rate of 18 per cent.

The jump drew cries of despaire from many consumers as well as from some economists and it accelerated the clamoring for Carter to do something—even something drastic—to bring inflation under control.

Carter now is conducting an "accelerated, thorough review" of his administration's economic policies, but his key aides are ruling out the most drastic remedy being suggested—wage and price controls.

There are several reasons for avoiding controls. As Canadians and Americans know from their experiences in the 1970s, an effective controls program is extremely difficult to devise and expensive to administer.

In addition, the end of controls is generally accompanied by a new inflationary push as both workers and industry try to recoup some of what they lost during the controls period.

For Carter, another reason for avoiding the idea is that Senator Edward Kennedy (Massachussetts Democrat), the president's chief rival for the 1980 Democratic nomination, advocated the imposition of controls about a month ago.

When the senator first called for a controls program, the idea was met with derision and criticism from private and government analysts, as well as from the White House. And as long as Kennedy remains an active challenge to Carter, it seems certain that Carter will want to avoid support for controls.

Polls show, however, that consumers are receptive to the idea and, recently, several influential economists, worried that an inflation psychology is becoming entrenched in the United States, have given support to the idea of large-scale government intervention in the economy through a wage-price freeze, controls or some combination.

And it is becoming increasingly clear that Carter's current economic policy, described by Brookings Institution economist Arthur Okum as "strategy to muddle through 1980," is proving ineffective in restraining inflation.

Highlights of Carter's program include voluntary wage and price standards, a relatively lean federal budget, and, most importantly, a sharp clamp on money supply.

Republican foes gang up on 'arrogant villain' Bush

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Republican presidential candidate George Bush battled Monday to overcome a firestorm of criticism from GOP rivals, threatening his challenge to Ronald Reagan in today's New Hampshire primary.

Four Republican contenders ganged up to picture Bush as the arrogant villain who blocked their participation in a weekend debate after Reagan invited them to join it three days before the first state primary in the nation.

There was less drama in New Hampshire's Democratic race, where Senator Edward Kennedy was campaigning right up to the primary. A Boston Globe poll showed him trailing President Carter by 25 points.

The Nashua Telegraph, sponsor of the front-runner Republican debate Saturday night, said in a statement that it alone was responsible for inviting only Bush and Reagan.

But Bush and Reagan exchanged new charges over the incident.

Trying to weather the storm at his Houston home, Bush charged that Reagan "went behind my back" to invite the other GOP candidates into the debate and added he thought the other candidates were "used" by Reagan.

And in an appearance on ABC-TV's Good Morning America, Bush said that Reagan "sandbagged me, frankly."

Reagan described the charges as "ridiculous."

Although most media attention was centred on New Hampshire state primary, three times as many delegates were at stake in Democratic caucuses set for Tuesday in Minnesota, where Carter was said to be holding a comfortable lead.

The debate flap could make the critical difference in the Bush-Reagan battle in the state, where most polls showing the two running neck and neck.

The four excluded candidates were proclaiming their hurt feelings in different areas of the state on the day before the primary. Senator Howard Baker, Senator Robert Dole and Representative John Anderson were strongly attacking Bush as the villain of the piece.

But Representative Philip Crane—who calls himself the most conservative candidate in the race—thought he would benefit from a Reagan loss. He suggested he and the other three had been ambushed in a situation he said was badly handled by the Reagan camp.

'Single group' killed several in U.S. pen riot

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — An investigator's note pad found at the New Mexico State Penitentiary indicates several inmates were involved in a number of the murders committed during the bloody riot three weeks ago, it was reported Monday.

The Albuquerque Tribune said the notes indicated that four of the inmates had been involved in at least six slayings each during the Feb. 2-3 riot. It said the notes showed one inmate was involved in as many as six killings.

The riot left 33 dead and 89 injured.

The Tribune said the information appeared to confirm reports that most of the killing was done by a single group of inmates.

Assistant district attorney Richard Baker said the note pad appeared to be one lost by one of his investigators. Baker said the information was not authorized for release, and criticized the newspaper for using it.

The paper said the information was found "in a yellow legal tablet apparently left behind by an investigator" at the prison. It did not say how it had obtained the tablet.

Baker, co-ordinating the investigation, said there was not sufficient information to confirm the existence of such a group. Other officials have denied the existence of a specific organized group involved in most of the killings.

The newspaper said the note pad included a sheaf of interview forms in which inmates were asked to describe any of the violence which they witnessed. The forms showed that some convicts refused to co-operate.

"I am not going to say nothing," one inmate wrote on the forms. "You people cannot protect anyone."

The Tribune said as many as 40 inmates were listed as suspects in various crimes. It said two who were killed were among the suspects.

Oil spill threatening historic Greek sites

ATHENS (UPI) — Anti-pollution specialists Monday fought to keep 100,000 tons of crude oil from a sunken tanker from fouling Greek tourist beaches and historic sites.

The Greek coast guard spread detergents to contain the oil slick from the Greek-owned vessel Irene's Serenade, which exploded, burned and sank Saturday in Navarino Bay.

Culture Minister Dimitrios Nianias said the slick so far had not damaged any of the archaeological and medieval ruins around the bay.

Britain's role in Rhodesia

Hope that the British-supervised election in Rhodesia this week will bring about peace and usher in a new era of prosperity and co-operation between all races in the embattled colony is fading fast.

According to a senior member of the British ceasefire commission, the incidence of violent guerrilla activity — including bomb attacks in Salisbury and the murder of missionaries — has increased up to and even beyond pre-truce levels.

Though interfactional rivalry between the eight black nationalist political parties now vying for votes was not unexpected and is blamed for isolated breaches of the ceasefire agreement, British governor Lord Soames has made it clear that he holds Patriotic Front co-leader Robert Mugabe by far the most culpable.

Statistics recently released by the commission which show that Mugabe's forces have been involved in 197 of the 224 reported clashes with armed guerrillas since the January 4 ceasefire, give considerable credence to this view.

Apart from the resumption of full-scale terrorism, there is the very real fear among Rhodesians — both black and white — that British and Commonwealth forces will quickly be withdrawn from the territory after the election, whatever the result.

This fear was first expressed last December by James Chikerema, the leader of one of the smaller black nationalist parties, when Lord Soames arrived in Salisbury to re-establish Rhodesia as a British colony. "Soon after the election," Mr. Chikerema then said, "there will be civil war and the British do not want to be part of it."

After meeting the governor last week, Mr. Chikerema still held the same view. He said: "The British have no solution to the violence and intimidation going on right now. The governor told me he was bewildered." The British, he added, would hold the elections even if they were not fair or free, and then "wash their hands like Pontius Pilate."

By all accounts Mr. Chikerema has good reason to believe that this may well be the case.

However, it must be recognized that the re-establishment of Rhodesia as a legal British colony carries with it considerably more responsibility for the United Kingdom than simply raising the Union Jack in Salisbury and appointing a British governor. By assuming this task, Britain automatically adopted the role of protector of all its subjects in that colony.

Morally, and perhaps even legally, it cannot withdraw that protection. If violence continues after the election or as Mr. Chickerema predicts, civil war breaks out, Britain cannot escape being involved.

Disco queen

During his brief tenure as Leader of the Opposition, Pierre Trudeau received the usual remuneration which goes with that job — a basic salary of $20,000 per annum, plus $26,900 in sessional allowances and $12,000 expenses.

With his re-election as Prime Minister, the allowances and expenses remain the same but his salary goes up $13,000 to $33,000. So his total annual income for the toughest job in Canada will be just under $72,000.

Meanwhile, Margaret Trudeau has found a somewhat easier way of turning an honest penny. According to the New York Daily News, she will receive $20,000 for three appearances at a Tokyo disco-restaurant which she will officially open early next month. All she has to do for that fee is dance.

COMMENT/BACKGROUND

How they'll count votes in Quebec

James Stewart
FP News Service

MONTREAL — The arithmetic of the referendum could become quite complicated in June when Quebecers finally vote yes or no to giving their government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

The simple rule that a majority is 50 per cent plus one vote will of course apply to the referendum, just as it would in any election or in any other democratic society. The official result will be determined by that rule.

But unofficially the straight count will be subjected to a differential Quebec calculus, an exercise in percentages, ratios and proportions which could be almost as important as the simple majority.

Premier Levesque and the PQ forces, for example, could win 60 per cent of the francophone vote and still lose the referendum.

On the other hand, with only a little more than 40 per cent of the total vote they could still claim at least a moral victory on the grounds that a majority of francophones had voted yes and had been thwarted by the block of nay-saying English-speaking Quebecers.

This complex numbers game stems from the fact that there are really two electorates in Quebec, the francophones accounting for slightly more than 80 per cent of the total, and the non-francophones, misleadingly but conveniently called anglophones.

The anglophone electorate is staunchly and massively federalist. Polls indicate that no more than 10 per cent of them (two per cent of the total electorate) may vote yes in the referendum.

The mass of anglophone voters are assumed, probably quite rightly, to be irrevocably committed to the No side. Furthermore, though this is not expressed openly, an anglophone vote is quite generally considered to be somewhat less authentic than a francophone vote on the issue of determining the future of the French-speaking state of Quebec.

The real quarry for both sides in the referendum campaign therefore, is the francophone voter.

Levesque as head of the yes forces and Liberal leader Claude Ryan as head of the no forces must pursue a double objective. One is to win a majority of the total vote. The other, almost as important, is to win a majority of the francophone vote.

The Liberals have set themselves a mere 51 per cent majority. They want to increase the percentage of votes obtained by all federalist parties in the Quebec election of 1976. Since the PQ got 41 per cent of the vote in that election, the federalists are aiming at winning more than 60 per cent of the vote in the referendum.

The significance of the 60 per cent figure is obvious. Given the block anglophone vote against sovereignty-association, a total No vote of less than 60 per cent would mean that a majority of francophones had voted Yes.

The defeat of the referendum then could, and most certainly would be attributed to stubborn anglophone opposition to the expressed will of the French-speaking majority.

He recently told the Paris newsmagazine Le Point: "If we get less than 40 per cent yes, I believe we would have to drop our plans and think of something else."

Why 40 per cent? Because 40 per cent of the total vote is roughly 50 per cent of the francophone vote. Anything less than that would mean that the PQ had not only lost the referendum but had also lost the majority support of French-speaking Quebecers. And it would not be able to blame the loss on the English.

Levesque's strategy is already clear and will become even clearer now that the federal election is over and the referendum campaign can proceed without such distractions.

He has been calling for a rassemblement of all French-speaking Quebecers to vote yes in the referendum with the same kind of solidarity shown by the fierce opponents of Quebec's evolution, those who profit from federalism, the Anglo-Canadians.

Forget you are Pequistes for the next three or four months, he tells his followers. On this crucial issue of Quebec's future there should be no Pequistes or Liberals or Union Nationale. Only Quebecois.

He identifies the opposition, the enemy. They are the Anglo-Canadian establishment, the self-serving federalist and anti-Quebec notables in the Montreal skyscrapers and in the West Island of Montreal. He is setting the anglos up as the villains of the piece, a kind of minus factor in the arithmetic of the referendum. The day may come when he can turn a referendum defeat into a moral victory by simple subtraction of anglophone votes.

Lubor Zink

OTTAWA — The cynics who maintained that a crazy election cannot be expected to come to a sane conclusion were right.

I resisted that logic of despair to the end, because to accept it meant accepting Pierre Trudeau's long-standing description of the bulk of the electorate as "obtuse".

It seemed inconceivable that enough voters would want to demean themselves by justifying his contempt for them. Besides, how could any rational person seek remedy from the consequences of the Trudeau decade in the very source of the mess? Surely there must be some common sense and instinct of self-preservation left in the country.

I was wrong. Not only in over-estimating the collective mind of the electorate but also in relying on the old witticism that people behave rationally once they have exhausted all other possibilities.

Obviously, we haven't reached that stage. By the time we get there, as we undoubtably shall under another Trudeau regime, the opportunity for free choice of an alternative may not be there.

This may sound like an unwarranted alarmist view. We have been through many elections and survived all the governments they produced — good, bad and indifferent. So why should this one be different? Surely the world is not going to come to an end.

No, the world won't come to an end just because Canadian voters resented an 18-cent tax on a gallon of the cheapest gas in all the industrial democracies. But I fear for survival of Canada as an independent, free nation if we continue the flight from reality last week's vote revealed.

There are two reasons why this election cannot be treated with the usual it-doesn't-matter-who-wins indifference.

One is the unprecedented economic damage (reflected in our 50-cent dollar) and political splintering of the country (reflected in the Quebec separatist government) after 11 years of Trudeau's rule.

The second — and in view of world events by far the more important reason — is the coming test of the few remaining free countries to withstand mounting pressures of the unfolding big Soviet expansion drive in the 1980's.

In this context our unnecessary 1980 election ceases to be the usual who-cares domestic affair.

There are strong indications that it matters a great deal to Soviet strategists who will be in charge in Ottawa during the Western world's "hour of extremity."

It was this implication of the outcome of our weird election which made me disbelieve — especially after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan — that enough voters could be so blinded by resentment of a face-the-facts budget as to put back in power the man who weakened our defences, tried to pull Canada out of NATO, signed a friendship protocol with Moscow and made a "viva Castro" display of his admiration for totalitarian tyrants.

It's a safe bet that few of the people whose votes put Pierre Trudeau back in uncontrolled power considered the implications for the coming showdown between the growing totalitarian empire and the shrinking remnants of the free world.

That does not, of course, make the democratically produced decision of the electorate any less valid and binding.

We have to live with whatever the consequences (hopefully modified by vigorous parliamentary opposition) turn out to be. But there can be little doubt that what we are witnessing is a potentially fatal electoral mistake.

It's the type of mistake sheltered and affluent free men tend to make when they are blinded by pocket-book issues in a seemingly routine exercise of the democratic process.

That's what happened, it seems to me, in the flight from reality, reason and responsibility of this strange election.

In such circumstances the exercise of freedom does not, unfortunately, exclude freedom to commit suicide. That is what we may be hellbent on doing.

Iran holds greater potential for superpower confrontation

William Hayter
The London Observer

LONDON — The Soviets seem to invade a country once every 12 years; Hungary in 1956, Czechoslovakia in 1968 and Afghanistan in 1980. This is better than Hitler, who did it every 12 months, but one wonders whose turn it will be in 1992.

Actually, the timing is clearly accidental, since it depends on factors outside the Kremlin's control. There is a strong similarity between the three invasions. Each was of a country where there was a Communist regime in power, but in danger of collapse. The Soviets intervened to replace the existing Communist leadership by another more efficient one, and one more subservient to themselves. The previous Communist leaders were deposed and in two cases (Nagy and Amin) killed; Dubcek precariously survives.

In each case there was a wholly unfounded claim to have been invited in and in each case the Soviets promised to withdraw their troops as soon as the position was stabilized. After 24 years in Hungary and 12 in Czechoslovakia, the Soviet troops are still there and it is not likely that we shall see them leaving Afghanistan very soon.

There is, however, one major difference between Hungary and Czechoslovakia on the one hand and Afghanistan on the other. The first two are within an area long recognized as part of the Soviet empire.

Afghanistan is not so recognized, even though it had had a Communist government for some years before the invasion and had long been subject to Soviet influence.

An analogy with the Kremlin's action there would have been if, when the shah was tottering, the Americans had sent troops into Iran to prop him up, or to replace him with a more efficient or more acceptable shah.

Of course the analogy is not complete, because Iran is on the borders of the Soviet Union. A reverse analogy would be if the Castro regime began to totter and Soviet troops were sent there to prop it up.

Analogies are often misleading. These two contingencies are unlikely but they seem to illustrate something important about the general situation.

In the first place, determined as the Kremlin always is not to let Communist regimes once established be overthrown, they can hardly put this determination into effect in areas too remote from their borders and too near the United States. The same inhibition applies the other way round to the United States government.

There is a lack of symmetry in the position of the two super powers. The Soviet Union has no vital interests in countries bordering on the United States (unless it be for purposes of aggression). But the United States, and the West as a whole, have vital interests in countries bordering on the Soviet Union or near it, particularly, of course, the oil of the gulf. Protecting these vital interests is militarily and politically awkward, both because they are so remote from American territory and because they are so dangerously (to both sides) near to Soviet territory.

It does not for the moment look as if these vital American and Western interests are immediately threatened. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was almost certainly intended primarily to prop up a tottering Communist regime in that country, not as a step towards Iran or the gulf, and if the Soviets could have saved the regime without military intervention they would probably have done so.

Much more dangerous situations could arise if the Kremlin were to feel itself obliged to intervene to prop up tottering Communist regimes in countries of more direct relevance to American vital interests than Afghanistan. Iran for instance, or Yugoslavia.

If the present unstable regime in Iran were to collapse, its most likely successor would be some form of Communist government, and this would confront both the Soviets and the Americans with very difficult decisions. The Americans would be tempted to destabilize, the Soviets to intervene to prop it up. The consequences are unforeseeable.

Equally, in Yugoslavia, if Marshal Tito's death led to any kind of disintegration, and particularly to any abandonment of Communism, the Soviets would find it very difficult to keep their hands off. Yugoslavia is after all explicitly covered by the Brezhnev Doctrine, evolved at the time of the invasion of Czechoslovakia, under which, to quote its author's speech of November 1968:

"When internal and external forces hostile to socialism attempt to turn the developments of any socialist country in the direction of the restoration of the capitalist system, when a threat arises to the cause of socialism in that country, a threat to the security of the socialist commonwealth as a whole — it already becomes not only a problem for the people of that country but also a general problem, the concern of all socialist countries."

Under this formulation the Soviet Union would feel itself practically obliged to intervene in Yugoslavia if its socialist system, however heretical, were to be threatened. Here again the consequences would be unforeseeable.

The existing regimes in Iran and Yugoslavia are, for various reasons, unpopular both in Moscow and in Washington. But in both cases the consequences of their disappearance would be so dangerous that it is probably in the interests of both the super powers to see that they do not occur.

Bus passes cutoff defended

Although half a loaf may be better than none, half a story tends to be of less value. I refer to the headline story re the loss to seniors of bus passes. If people wish to take a stand of opposition to the transit committee's action, I would prefer that such a stand be based on full information.

First, one is led to believe that the action is "anti-seniors," which I do not believe is an accurate interpretation of the committee's attitude. The passes referred to are not confined to seniors but are in fact an adjunct to supplementary income assistance, issued and administered by the provincial human resources ministry. As such, they are not, and should not be construed as, part of the transit system. (The transit system continues to maintain its concessionary fares for seniors and students.)

As long as the transit operation was handled by B.C. Hydro there was apparently no difficulty in such inter-departmental subsidies. We are, however, not about to be placed in a different situation. The province is unloading responsibility for the operation of the transit system onto local jurisdictions, and deficits will be picked up by local residents, whether through gasoline tax, hydro surcharge, or property tax.

What the committee is attempting to convey is that it is bad enough to have to pick up transit-generated deficits, without having to also assume financial responsibility for human resources social assistance programs. I am personally not prepared to saddle local taxpayers with any additional costs, in order to ensure that the provincial budget may show a surplus.

No doubt a number of people are anxious about loss of bus passes. Might I suggest that such concern should be properly directed toward the agency responsible for those passes, namely, the ministry of human resources.

Cadboro Bay group to continue fight

You may recall that the Cadboro Bay Residents Association initiated court action to overturn the Minnie Mountain land use contract in the fall of 1978.

The main issue before the B.C. Supreme Court was the eligibility of one of the aldermen of Saanich council and whether his vote in favor of the project would be allowed to stand. (The council vote was 5-4 in favor of the project). The association's contention that the alderman had a conflict of interest was upheld by the court and the bylaw was quashed.

That decision was appealed by both Saanich council and the developer and although the B.C. Court of Appeal found the alderman to be in a conflict of interest, Saanich council and the developer were successful in having the bylaw reinstated. In January, 1980 the association tried to have the case heard by the Supreme Court of Canada but permission was not granted.

Both courts ruled that the alderman had a conflict of interest and was disqualified. However, this ruling had no effect on the bylaw on which he voted. We see little use in conflict of interest legislation if it can't be applied to quash bylaws.

The association's attempt to have the case heard by the Supreme Court of Canada was denied. That court ruled that the conflict of interest legislation was peculiar to B.C. and had been dealt with by the B.C. courts. There was no ruling on the merits of the case.

Now, because of these recent rulings, no bylaw can be challenged on the grounds of conflict of interest. Even if it can be proven that an alderman voted when he was not legally entitled to do so, no action can be taken that will change his vote, even by the courts.

The association is disappointed to have failed to overturn the bylaw but is determined to continue the fight.

Museum chief swats 'fiction' on train move

Recently there was concern in some quarters over the present condition of the museum train, which is part of the British Columbia Provincial Museum in Victoria.

Now that those interested in making news seem to have run out of fictions, perhaps the facts would be of interest.

Adhering to a plan made in 1974, last fall the museum removed its own exhibits from its own railway cars, doing so under the direction of the craftsmen who installed them five years ago. Exhibition floor space left empty between exhibitions is not usually given to an interior decorator to be made pretty for the chance visits of inspectors or tradesmen.

The exhibits were solidly made and therefore difficult to remove, and what wood was salvaged went to the workshop in a local prison to be recycled. After a thorough vacuuming the coaches were shut and stored in Victoria, certainly not beautiful inside, but ready for new exhibits when they were available.

Some weeks ago Railway Appliances Research Ltd. of Vancouver moved the coaches to Vancouver, acting for another ministry wishing to borrow them. Any small damage done after the cars left Victoria was not done by the museum, and will be repaired as stated in the loan agreement before the coaches are returned.

The Provincial Museum has a solid and, we hope, well earned reputation for having some success at doing things well. Naturally the museum is concerned over the recent accusations, which have mostly been of the when-are-you-going-to-stop-beating-your-wife? variety.

We can only speculate that someone is currently high on trains and low on the museum, and wants to manufacture tales of villains while not encumbered by facts; I would assume doing it all to somehow benefit trains.

R.Y. EDWARDS,
Director,
B.C. Provincial Museum.

ALLOW SEAMAN TO STAY

I was deeply troubled by your front page article on Feb. 14, which told of a Polish seaman, Mr. T. Jakubowski, and of his struggle to remain in Canada. I have since read that his appeal has failed and that he must leave this country by Feb. 28.

I must make it clear that when this man returns to Poland, he will face harassment and imprisonment.

I am not of Polish origin but I have lived in Poland and I have personally seen many examples of political repression. The current regime would not remain in power for one moment if it were not for the massive Soviet military presence there. What is happening in Afghanistan now, has been happening in Poland for many, many years.

Perhaps this is not clear to the immigration officials who have made this decision. Perhaps they do not believe that this man will suffer if he is sent back, I will tell you the truth. He will suffer.

Perhaps the government is only implementing the law. If this is the case, the law should be examined and I would like to ask that an exception be made. Mr. Jakubowski is employed and will be a good citizen.

In Eastern Europe, we are known as the free world. This is our image. Defectors come here with hopes of gaining that freedom, that better life. They come here with faith in us and in our political system. We must not betray that faith.

I make a plea to our government and to the Canadian public, to allow this seaman to remain in Canada and to continue his life here.

Columnist draws fire for image reporting

If Alan Fotheringham has any journalistic talent at all it lies in the diarrhea of words with which he successfully conceals his desperate constipation of thought, rather than in a perceptive analyses of political affairs. His latest effort to absolve the media of any blame for their blatantly unfair coverage of Mr. Clark is a case in point.

The media cannot shrug off its responsibility in image-making, for if they do not make images they certainly misrepresent them. The public has to rely entirely upon the media for the behind-the-scenes glimpses into the politician's life and idiosyncrasies; the stories which "filter down to the schoolyard," are fed to us by the media. Who else? We don't accompany the leaders on their private airplanes, partake of their chateaubriand and drink their chablis!

If, for example, Fotheringham and I were both acquainted with Clark or Trudeau or Lougheed, he could then express his opinions and I would be in a position to accept or reject them on the basis of personal knowledge. As it is, I am forced to rely on his very biased impressions. A man who is a hero to a reporter could well be anaethema to me. And, let it be remembered, the media has the last word always.

So while every imaginary gaffe of Clark's was enlarged and snickered over, such as the "hand chopping," the "bony, pointing finger," etc., we heard nothing about Trudeau's shoulders going up and down like an elevator in a department store, a mannerism so distracting as to make his meandering thoughts even more incoherent and irrelevant.

Animal shelter blame dished out

One cannot put all the blame on the Good Shepherd Shelter, for it was the public that took their pets up there.

You would not leave your child in a place like that, and yet you left your pet, which was part of your family.

You should have walked around, and seen the conditions of the kennels and cat houses, before you left them and asked about the food and care of your pet.

I am with the Cats Rescue and we have gotten a lot of abandoned cats and kittens, some starving, some so abused they are afraid to trust anyone, and we try to build up their spirits again.

We have found kittens in shoe boxes, with the lid on, left in the woods to die of starvation, and I have had to have them put to sleep by a vet in Victoria. Others were thrown out of cars, because people didn't want them any more.

There have to be changes at Mill Bay, including:

- The cat houses torn down and rebuilt in a dry place, insulated and heated and kept clean with a run.
- Good help, people with experience.
- There should be a vet there at all times.
- A limit on the number of animals kept.
- Sick animals, who will not get better, put to sleep humanely.
- Better management, someone who has worked at SPCA for at least five years.
- Spay and neuter program requiring that the pet must be done by date shown on adoption agreement.

JOAN MANDEFIELD,

GENEROSITY QUESTIONED

The closing of the Langwood Activity Centre in Langford, an old workshop building next to the Dogwood School, which was cheerfully operating for the older mentally handicapped "graduates," seems to cast a shadow on the generosity of the entire community around Victoria.

As a reviewer for a local paper some years ago this writer attended some pleasant tea-time get-togethers of the parents of these handicapped together with one or two instructors or teachers and noted the fine goods being produced in the workshop in the daytime — items of woodcraft, garden items such as "planters", and knitting and woollen goods and so on. The community is enriched by such undertakings. Many craft shops and charity outlets around town handle these modest crafts.

Closing the centre will be pretty hard on the parents, many of whom are senior citizens.

They will have to look after the children now all the time and not get the usual necessary time-off available to ordinary parents of school children or those with their young people working in business. Also, the habits and friendships built up by association at the centre by these children will be taken away, to say nothing of their modest 75 cents a hour pay and such little rewards to raise their spirits.

'Nigger' slur draws denial

We, the undersigned attended the Capital Regional District committee meeting on Jan. 30, at which Director Couvelier was alleged to have used the word "nigger." All of us confirm that we did not hear him use that word.

We also wish to confirm that the minutes of that meeting correctly show that Director Couvelier's purpose in introducing the letter from the Women's Employment Committee was to further the argument that a woman should be considered for Economic Development Commission membership.

Baden-Powell never rated perfect man

In the Sunday Colonist of Feb. 17 a column by Sydney Harris was a bit of a shock. While we involved in the scouting movement celebrate B-P Week, the week during which the birthday of Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell falls (Feb. 22) and to honor the good things that the man left to the youth of the world, Mr. Harris chooses to bring to our attention all the negative events of his battle career. Today's young people read the newspapers and assess what is "fed" to them by the media and I feel that with his column Mr. Harris has managed to drop a great many notches in the esteem of both the young people and the leaders of the scouting movement.

I do not think that anyone, except perhaps his wife, Lady Baden-Powell, has ever thought the man was perfect or a saint. B-P did not attain the rank of colonel in the British army only by kissing the hands of the right high-ranking ladies or smiling brightly at the right times.

Bigotry was the fashion of the day of that era. In all the wars fought since time began the great leaders have had to be callous, practise deception and many times be unjust during war time to enable their nation to achieve victory.

My wishes for you Mr. Harris, are that your column of Feb. 17 will be remembered and revered 75 years later throughout Canada as are those things Lord Baden-Powell has left for us to remember him by.

New thrust for cancer drug trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Calling the results of tests to date "promising," the American Cancer Society says it is expanding its support for trials of interferon as a potential cancer-fighting drug.

The society announced Monday it would add $3.4 million to the study, more than doubling the number of patients who could be treated. The tests on interferon against human cancer began with the society's $2.4-million grant two years ago.

Dr. Saul Gusberg of Mount Sinai School of Medicine, the society's national president, said Monday that more research was needed to prove whether interferon was useful in treating cancer. He said results of the test so far were "promising."

The trials, taking place at 10 U.S. medical centres, use daily doses on 150 patients with either melanoma (a skin cancer), multiple myeloma (a bone marrow cancer), breast cancer or non-Hodgkin's lymphoma (a lymph-system cancer).

Interferon (pronounced like "interfere") was discovered in 1957 as a potent natural substance that helps cells fight off virus infection.

In recent years, experimenters have found that it also seems to help protect animals against some kinds of cancer, and may do the same for humans. It is less toxic than most anti-cancer drugs and works by a different, though still unknown, mechanism.

It is also one of the world's costliest drugs—$150 for a daily dose and $30,000 or more for a course of treatment.

"The unprecedented size of the society's appropriations for interferon is due to the very high cost of the material," Gusberg said. "There is little expectation that much less expensive material will become available in less than two to three years."

Part of the cancer society grant will help set up U.S. sources. Several organizations plan to produce interferon from white blood cells, and others hope to make it from rapidly growing cell cultures or from bacteria that have been genetically manipulated, the last a recent breakthrough.

"As people need and want more, the cost hopefully will come down some," said Dr. Jordan Gutterman of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Tex., chairman of the study. "With the $2.4 million, we were able to treat about 150 patients. I would hope that we could double that (with the new appropriation)."

But Gutterman said that the medical centres now involved in the trial still had not received enough interferon to treat all 150 patients, and no new patients would be added until 1981 or 1982.

Sore over pay, sergeants seize Surinam

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — Army sergeants disgruntled over pay and working conditions seized power in this small South American state Monday, striking swiftly behind a gunboat barrage in a pre-dawn coup. Local reporters said up to 15 persons were killed in the shelling and gunfights.

The rebels issued a statement saying they would abide by the democratic principles of this former Dutch colony, which has a population of 450,000 people.

The whereabouts of Prime Minister Henck Arron, leader of the moderate National party, and most of his cabinet ministers could not be determined immediately. One report said that Arron fled to Paranam, 32 kilometres south of the capital.

Attorney-General Maurice de Miranda was reported wounded in the side and undergoing surgery at a hospital.

Radio stations broadcast the statement issued by the sergeants' National Military Council. It said the army commander-in-chief and the justice minister had been taken into custody by the insurgents. The council's statement also announced a curfew from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. and placed the one government and three private radio stations under censorship.

The early-morning coup in this sleepy tropical capital climaxed a year of growing tension between the Arron government and the non-commissioned officers.

Surinam is sandwiched between Guyana and French Guiana on the northeastern shoulder of South America. Most Surinamese live in the coastal area—Paramaribo is 24 kilometres upriver from the Atlantic—and the dense interior jungle remains a forbidding barrier to settlement.

Opposes Carter view

Kennedy bucks north pipeline

SEATTLE (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said Monday he opposed construction of an oil pipeline from Washington state to Minnesota and would rather see an all-land route to transport Alaskan oil to the U.S. Mid-West.

Kennedy's position is in direct conflict with that of President Carter, who has endorsed the Northern Tier pipeline proposal to ship oil along the Pacific Coast to a port in Washington state and movement through an all-American pipeline eastward.

"I am opposed to the Northern Tier pipeline because it presents a serious threat to the ecology of Puget Sound," Kennedy said. He was in New Hampshire campaigning for today's Democratic presidential primary.

"The citizens of the state should demand justification for the president's behind-closed-doors decision to take such risks," his statement said.

A Kennedy spokesman added that the decision was made without adequate consultation with people and agencies of the Washington state.

"Accidents are inevitable," Kennedy said. "These accidents would be devastating to Washington's fishing industry and to the unique character of Puget Sound, the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the state's incomparable Pacific Coast beaches."

Kennedy said he continued to support an all-land pipeline to the East, "when sufficient supplies and needs can be proven."

He also said that alternatives to Northern Tier that made use of existing routes were likely to transport oil to the U.S. Midwest more cheaply and more quickly than Northern Tier.

Pierre Trudeau, Liberal party leader and prime minister-designate following last Monday's federal election, has said he would favor an all-land pipeline route through Canada that would largely parallel the Alaska Highway.

A third alternative proposed is to ship the oil by tanker down the coast and then use a system of existing pipelines that would take the oil through Canada.

Reforms cripple Cameroon

DOUALA, Cameroon (UPI) — Thousands of poor people in Zaire have plunged deeper into the abyss of poverty because of an unsuccessful currency reform attempted by the near-bankrupt government, diplomatic and business sources said Monday.

Diplomatic sources label as a failure the effort involving the recall of more than 90 per cent of the nation's currency last December. They say black marketeers and Zaire's privileged elite were saved by corrupt officials.

The latest disaster for Zaire's economy comes as the government of President Mobuto Sese Seko, already scheduled to get $325 million in international aid this year, is seeking another loan from the World Bank to cover a deficit projected at between $350 million and $422 million.

As a requirement for the aid, Mobuto agreed to reforms demanded by the International Monetary Fund, including a more than 80 percent devaluation of the currency in the last 15 months.

But Western businessmen arriving in Cameroon and diplomats said the recall, apparently aimed at cutting the amount of money in circulation to improve the government's financial position, took the IMF by surprise.

Diplomatic sources said many people in rural areas of the sprawling African nation either did not hear about the exchange ordered last Dec. 21 or were unable to reach banks in the few days allowed for exchange.

"Many peasants who had just sold their recently harvested crops for cash were, reportedly wiped out" financialy, diplomats said.

Daring grab in Rome

ROME (AP) - A daring gang posing as railway workers pounced on two guards of a Brinks subsidiary taking a payroll inside the Italian transportation ministry here Monday and escaped through a lavatory window with an estimated $840,000, police reported.

A caller to an Italian news agency claimed the robbery was staged by the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist gang.

Investigators were uncertain about the authenticity of the claim, but the Red Brigades group has been known to stage bank robberies to finance underground activities. Police also have blamed the Red Brigades for seven of the 12 political assassinations in Italy this year.

Police noted the meticulous planning by at least six persons to gain admission to the guarded ministry building and blend in with several hundred employees waiting for their pay at the ministry bank.

Witnesses said the the gang struck when a transport company's white armored car pulled into the courtyard and two guards carried in two sacks of money.

CHECK THESE NEW BENEFITS AND OPTIONS FOR AUTOPLAN '80

It's getting close to renewal time for Autoplan insurance. The deadline is February 29th for the majority of B.C. motorists.
Although rates are up by 10% because of increased costs, individual premiums may increase or decrease because of changes in ICBC's rating structure and the introduction of Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program.
Your Autoplan insurance for 1980 also features some new built-in benefits for everyone and some new options you should consider for your personal protection when you renew.

CHANGED COVERAGES

1. INCREASED LIABILITY COVERAGE

Like everything else, the cost of settling bodily injury claims continues to rise. So, for your greater protection, we have increased the compulsory minimum for Third Party Liability insurance to $100,000 from $75,000. For the nine out of 10 motorists who carry more than just the minimum coverage, there will be no extra cost.

2. INCREASED NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS

Recognizing the higher cost of living, a number of no-fault accident benefits are being increased.

- Weekly benefits increased to $100 from $75.
- Dependent benefits increased to $25 from $15 a week.
- Funeral expenses increased to $1,000 from $750.

3. SAFE DRIVING VEHICLE DISCOUNT CHANGE

A major change in the discount program came into effect last September. It waives the earlier requirement that drivers in British Columbia had to be insured under Autoplan for six months before they became eligible for a Safe Driving Vehicle Discount. Now, the discount can be applied without the waiting period and it is based on the owner's previous claim record. A one-year claim-free record earns a 15% discount; two years earns 25%; three qualifies for 32½%. This change principally benefits people buying an additional vehicle and new residents to the province.

NEW COVERAGE

INVERSE LIABILITY COVERAGE

In some U.S. states and Canadian provinces, your right to recover costs for damage to your vehicle through the courts is legally prohibited when a resident of that state or province is at fault in the accident. This new Autoplan feature, which is included as part of your basic coverage at no extra cost to you, provides for payment of your collision damage cost to the extent that you are not at fault for the accident.

NEW OPTIONS

1. UNDER INSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE

For an additional premium you can now extend your protection to cover accidents where the insurance of the driver at fault is not sufficient to cover claims for bodily injury and death. If you are the victim of an accident, and you carry this option you are protected to the limit of your own Third Party Liability coverage.

2. SUPPLEMENTARY NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS

If you feel the current disability and death benefits offered under the No-Fault Accident Benefits schedule are insufficient to cover your needs, this option allows you to buy a higher level of benefits for an additional premium.

AND THE F.A.I.R. PROGRAM STARTS

Autoplan '80 will also introduce Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program.

The premium you pay may be affected by one or more of these changes:

- Sex and marital status will be removed as rating factors. This will mean a decrease of about 30% in the average premium paid by male vehicle owners or principal operators under 30 years of age.
- The first step will be taken towards removing geographical location as a rating factor. As a result, premiums will increase in some territories and decrease in others.
- The Safe Driving Incentive Grant will be discontinued because the young, single, male drivers who received this grant will benefit more from the new lower premiums
- An additional premium is no longer required for an occasional operator under 25 years of age.

If you have any questions, consult your independent Autoplan agent, or your Motor Licence Office. Be sure to pick up your Motorist Kit when renewing your insurance. It contains a handy pocket to protect your insurance and registration documents, useful information if you have an accident and details of Autoplan insurance for 1980.

Renew early and take time to discuss the new coverages and your requirements with your agent.

Guard slain in heist

MONTREAL (UPC) — An armored truck security guard was killed with a sawed-off shotgun Monday in a wild shootout with two masked gunmen who fled with up to $18,000 in weekend receipts from a large midtown shopping mall.

Police identified the victim as Raymond Vince, 55, a veteran of 32 years' service with Brink's Canada Ltd.

A second Brink's Canada Ltd. security guard escaped injury but was in shock.

The bandits, one wearing a smiling Halloween mask and armed with a sawed-off shotgun, escaped with between $15,000 and $18,000 collected by the two guards in a regular pickup of weekend cash receipts, police said.

The slain guard, mortally wounded by shotgun blasts in the chest and shoulder, was pronounced dead in hospital soon after the mid-morning holdup in the corridors of Place Bonaventure.

There were few shoppers in the mall but the gunfire, "about four or five shots," brought storekeepers running, witnesses said.

"I look up, I see a man standing in front of the store. He's got a dark raincoat on. He's got a rubber mask like the Hallowe'en type with a smile on it," said Bob Anderson, manager of the Four Season's menswear store.

"I see the guard further in the front. I hear a commotion in the lefthand corner of our store and it's the other Brink's guard going down for cover."

Health services 'going downhill' with block funds

SASKATOON (CP) — There has been a dramatic erosion of health care services since the federal government introduced block funding two years ago, Rev. Bob Ogle said Monday during the opening day of hearings into Canada's health care system.

Ogle said that since block funding—a system under which the federal government provides each province with a set amount or block of funds for health care—was introduced in 1977, the erosion has occurred in two major areas.

Provincial plans have not all maintained the same levels of services, and "reasonable access supposedly guaranteed to all Canadians" has been reduced, he said.

Ogle, a Roman Catholic priest just re-elected MP for Saskatoon East, is the federal NDP health critic in the Commons.

He presented his party's brief as Emmett Hall of Saskatoon, former justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, opened a series of hearings to review Canada's health care system.

The first brief was from the Saskatchewan Association of Registered Nurses which called for research into health care needs.

The hearings, which will take Hall across Canada, mark the second time he has investigated Canada's health care system on behalf of the federal government. He was chairman of a royal commission whose recommendations in 1964 led to the implementation of the health care system in Canada.

The current hearings were commissioned by Health Minister David Crombie before the Conservative government was defeated.

Ogle advocated a return to the cost-sharing system used before block funding was adopted. Under that system, federal money was provided to be spent on specific health care programs.

"In 1979-80, the federal government is handing over to the provinces $6.3 billion in tax points with no say in how that money is spent," he said.

Ogle said that New Brunswick is taking $10 million from its health care funds and using the money for other purposes.

The use of premiums in provinces such as Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia meant that some people paid twice for health care—once through their taxes and again through premiums.

Screams won't help a bit

Unvoted money already spent

By CAROL GOAR
Colonist FP service

OTTAWA—Your MP can yell or wave his arms in Parliament or complain bitterly, but it won't do a bit of good.

In 35 days, the country will reach the end of an unprecedented fiscal year—the only one in recent memory in which elected representatives did not approve one cent of the more than $50 billion the government spent.

By the time Parliament meets in April, the 1979-80 fiscal year will already be history, the money will be gone and any MP wishing to challenge the administration's spending decisions will be out of luck.

"IT'S physically impossible for Parliament to vote on money that's already been spent," said one of the senior bureaucrats who has been busy safeguarding the keys to the national treasury during the unusual on-again-off-again election period.

"If somebody was violently opposed to what we did, he might be able to scream a bit in the Commons and win a few points on the 11 o'clock news, but that's about it."

The bureaucrats who have been managing the government's finances since last spring get all hot and bothered over suggestions that there is anything undemocratic about the situation.

THEY INSIST they've only been doing their jobs. Furthermore, they've been prudent and operated within both the letter and spirit of the law.

But in the privacy of their well-appointed 22nd floor headquarters of a downtown office tower, a few senior Treasury Board officials are chortling about what a pleasant year it's been without pesky MPs looking over their shoulders.

Life became tidy and predictable. The bureaucrats enjoyed doling out money to the various departments, without having to provide armloads of explanatory documents to the country's 282 MPs and without having to wait helplessly while Parliament went through its annual wrangle over the estimates.

UNTIL A few days ago, most bureaucrats believed Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau would call Parliament back into session before the end of the fiscal year (March 31) so MPs could at least go through the formality of rubber-stamping the estimates. But Trudeau said last week that he did not expect the new session to begin until early April.

That means all 1979-80 government spending will have been under the governor-general's authority instead of that of Parliament. There is nothing unconstitutional about such an arrangement. It is spelled out in federal legislation that "when payment is urgently required for the public good" and no other source of funds is available, cabinet may approach the governor general and request a special warrant.

But this usually happens for one or two months a year at most—during elections, summer breaks and other Parliamentary recesses. The measure was devised to keep the machinery of government running through such interruptions.

IN APRIL, when the first governor general's warrant was requested, officials at Treasury Board fully expected that, as always, they'd use the emergency legislation until Parliament was back in session, then pass spending power back to MPs.

But the short-lived 31st Parliament never managed to approve the 1979-80 spending estimates. The figures were examined by MPs in several committees and debated briefly in the House of Commons, but before they could be passed, the country was plunged into an unexpected second election.

This meant not only that the initial string of governor-general's warrants—worth $13.3 billion, covering the period from April 1 to mid-November—was left hanging, but also meant that another set of special warrants—whose value will add up to $5.3 billion by March 31—would be needed to get the country through the rest of the fiscal year.

(THIS ADDS up to $18.6 billion. Actually the government spends about $50 billion a year, but 60 per cent of that is done without Parliament's specific authorization. Expenditures such as old age pensions, family allowances, welfare payments to the provinces and hundreds of other committments are laid down in law and take place automatically).

If Parliament refuses to give the government the money it demands, it is automatically taken to be a vote of non-confidence. To reject a governing party's spending plans amounts to voting against that party's right to govern. The importance estimates are assigned in the survival of a Parliament shows that control of spending—at least in theory—is one of the fundamental duties of a democratically-elected Parliament.

Except last year. When MPs get settled into their new desks in the House of Commons in April, they will be treated to a detailed summary of how Treasury Board handed out billions of dollars, while they were too busy to notice.

Beyond-repair Glenshiel Hotel due for demolition

The 70-year-old Glenshiel Hotel at 606 Douglas, purchased by the provincial New Democratic Party government in 1972, will probably be demolished to make way for government buildings, a highways ministry official said Monday.

Al Rhodes, assistant deputy minister, administration, said the building is "beyond economical repair," and in time will probably be demolished.

"The fabric of the building is gone, and it comes nowhere near meeting building codes," Rhodes said.

The 60 residents of the hotel will be relocated by the B.C. Housing Commission over the next two years, Highways Minister Alex Fraser announced Monday. The highways ministry leases the building from the B.C. Building Corporation, which owns the Glenshiel.

Fraser said the housing commission will meet with the residents to see how their housing needs can best be met. The commission has undertaken similar relocation tasks in the past, showing great care and concern for the residents involved, Fraser said.

He added that minor repairs will be made on the building to make it comfortable for the residents over the next two years.

Victoria MLA Gordon Hanson said Monday he was "very surprised that they have done such an about face."

"A commitment was given by Alex Fraser sometime ago that the Glenshiel would be maintained."

Hanson inspected the hotel two months ago and found it deteriorating, and says Evan Wolfe, minister reponsible for BCBC, agreed at that time to put a new roof on the building.

"We need more, not less, of this type of accommodation," Hanson said.

"It's close to town, and close to the park, and the residents can maintain their independence."

He added that the cost of repairing the 80 apartments in the building would probably compare favorably on a per unit basis with the money which the government spent last fall in the purchase of the Oak Bay Manor.

'Off record' talks urged on sewerage

Among key items to be discussed at the closed-door session will be the possible loss of 5,000 feet of $84-a-foot outfall pipe owing to storage methods, and the court claims and counter-claims over the failure of plans to install the pipe at Clover Point.

Ald. Isabel Craig originally pressed Monday for a full explanation from Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell on the damage to the pipe and who was responsible for it.

(If the entire length is written off, regional taxpayers face a bill of $420,000 just for the pipe. The full bill for the court costs may never be known.)

However, she settled for less after Ald. Neil Swainson suggested an in-camera meeting to bring Oak Bay representatives up to date on outfall developments.

Swainson recalled that an in-camera session was held a couple of years ago between regional and Oak Bay representatives which was very fruitful.

(Just what was discussed and decided at that meeting, and the fact it was held at all, has never before been made public.)

Council startled: Maltwood sale, interchange off

Plans for an interchange at McKenzie and the Pat Bay Highway, part of the McKenzie extension, have been shelved, a startled Saanich council was told Monday.

And while council was still digesting this, Ald. Sandy Noel dropped another bombshell—sale of the Maltwood property at Royal Oak to Saanich had not been approved by the cabinet.

Noel, who blamed former long-time Saanich mayor Hugh Curtis for shelving the highway plan, wondered "if the same guy has his finger in the Maltwood pie?"

Asked Noel: "Does Curtis think he's still mayor of Saanich?"

Curtis, finance minister in the Bennett government, is Saanich-The Islands MLA. He could not be reached for comment.

Shelving of the interchange was confirmed by chief municipal planner Gil Laurenson and municipal engineer Clifford Warren. Laurenson said he had received word from a "highly-placed provincial highways employee."

Warren said Saanich had on file a letter from the highways ministry to the effect that the interchange would be built as second phase of the McKenzie extension.

Council approved the $7 million first phase two months ago.

Noel asked his council colleagues to adopt a motion authorizing Mayor Mel Couvelier to check with Highways Minister Alex Fraser to "see if any pressure has been exerted by another cabinet minister to shelve the interchange proposal."

Couvelier said "it appears odd. There seems to be a monkey wrench in the works."

The mayor said he had been told "unofficially" the Maltwood property deal had been before the cabinet.

He agreed with council members who said that the absence of an official announcement regarding the sale placed the municipality in a bad spot.

"We have proposals to discuss with prospective tenants—a restaurant and the Lord Chamberlain Players Society."

Couvelier was instructed to contact Curtis and obtain a statement on the status of the interchange and Maltwood and report back.

Council agreed four months ago to pay the University of Victoria $375,000 for the property. But the cabinet must approve the sale of any university property.

Shopping centre wins approval

Saanich council approved a 20,000-square-foot shopping centre at Kisber and Broadmead Monday despite opposition by 10 area residents and against the advice of chief municipal planner Gil Laurenson.

Rezoning of the 70,000-square-foot site near the northeast corner of Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Cross Road was supported by seven area homeowners.

Laurenson, recommending rejection, said the highest and best use of the site appeared to lie between apartment development or a commercial use. Area residents had indicated their needs were satisfied with existing commercial development, and there is a shortage of land suitable and acceptable for apartments in the municipality.

Neighborhood resident Ian Cass said council should take a look at the amount of commercial-retail rezoning taking place in the municipality.

"I want to see a policy statement from council that this is the end of the northward progress of commercial-retail development along Shelbourne."

Ald. Robert Cameron said if development continued unchecked "Shelbourne will look like another Kingsway (in Vancouver)."

Parents may help choose principals

Parents may get a say in the selection of school principals following a review of the Greater Victoria school district's hiring procedures.

The board decided Monday night, while considering a letter from an Oak Bay high school parent, to refer the question of parental involvement to the board's personnel committee. The move had the strong endorsement of schools superintendent Allan Stables, who said "times are changing, and if it doesn't happen this year it might happen next year.

"We can't have parents involved just in selling hot dogs."

The letter from Oak Bay high school parents' advisory committee president Robin Riddihough noted that the current principal is retiring at the end of the year and that the advisory committee is concerned about his replacement.

"It is critical that the new principal be both sympathetic and prepared to co-operate in the aims and functions of the advisory committee."

Currently, trustees, administrators and representatives of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association are involved in the selection of candidates for principalships in the district, while the actual assignment of principals to schools is made by the board alone. No parents are involved.

Riddihough's letter was referred to the board's personnel committee, where the selection process will be reviewed to determine if parents can be more actively involved.

B.C.-SPCA to appraise Good Shepherd shelter

The B.C.-SPCA announced Monday that conditions and operations at the Good Shepherd Shelter for animals in Mill Bay will be given a "thorough appraisal" with "professional assistance of a veterinarian from outside the Cowichan Valley area."

The announcement, made in a news release, said the shelter was visited and reviewed last week by B.C.-SPCA executive director Al Hickey.

As a result of this review, Hickey recommended the shelter be appraised, and his recommendation was approved by the SPCA's committee for management.

"When the written report is completed, the B.C.-SPCA will request a meeting with the board of directors of the Good Shepherd Shelter Foundation to discuss all aspects of the report," the news release said.

The shelter was the subject of an in-depth examination in the Colonist Feb. 10.

War hero Pearkes 92 today

Celebrating his 92nd birthday today is Major-General George Pearkes, VC, of Victoria. Born Feb. 26, 1888, in Watford, England, he came to Canada at the age of 18, served with the old Royal North West Mounted Police, and in both world wars. He was MP for Nanaimo and then Esquimalt-Saanich, and defence minister in the Diefenbaker government. He was also a highly popular lieutenant-governor of B.C., serving from 1960 to 1968. He and his wife Blytha will celebrate his birthday at their home on Tattersall Drive.

PLANETS TEAM UP FOR SHOW

The planets are putting on an interesting show in the early night sky over Victoria right now, with Mars and Jupiter in "starring" roles.

Frank Younger, an astronomer at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, said the first to be seen, in the southwest right after sunset, is Venus, the brightest object in the sky after the moon.

Rising after sunset just off the eastern horizon are Mars and Jupiter. Mars is the reddish object slightly fainter than its planetary "neighbor."

The two move across the night sky and by midnight are close to the meridian in the south at this time.

Also rising in the east, and visible about three hours after sunset, is Saturn.

Rookie shows clout

Oak Bay rookie Ald. Susan Brice showed her political experience Monday night when she succeeded in pushing through a motion to upgrade Lafayette Park this year.

The park, just north of Shoal Bay, was the subject of council discussion a year ago when it was agreed to expedite drainage improvements to a playing field and install an adventure playground.

Brice, former school board chairman, said Monday there was a feeling among residents that council might not proceed this year with an agreement with residents to spend $17,000 on public works and $11,000 on an adventure playground.

She moved that council reaffirm its decision to improve Lafayette Park, approve a staff proposal for its upgrading, and ask the administrator to report back with appropriate ways of paying for the cost.

Opposition to the principle of approving a major expenditure without it first going through the budgeting procedure was voiced by aldermen Neil Swainson and Peter Bunn, although they agreed they could see the merits of this proposal.

Bunn also said council was interfering with the business of its parks and recreation commission. However, Brice said, most of the work was a municipal responsibility.

Municipal administrator James Craven said although plans for improvements at Lafayette took a setback when the one-third recreational facilities grant fell through, additional revenues had been found to pay for the work.

The vote passed unanimously.

Centre chorus grows

The Greater Victoria school board has added its voice to the chorus of those wanting to keep the Langwood Activity Centre for the Retarded open.

The board voted Monday to write to the human resources ministry, asking it to reverse the decision not to grant additional funds to the centre to enable it to stay open. The workshop is operated by the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Retarded, which plans to close the activity centre's doors on March 31.

The association says it cannot continue to subsidize the workshop. The expected deficit next year is $33,000.

Esquimalt sells lot

Victoria May Gains, along with her husband, topped the tenders with a bid of $35,100 for the single-family dwelling lot.

Central Saanich openings draw eight candidates

Nominations for the March 15 byelection for Central Saanich mayor and aldermen closed Monday, and featured three candidates who ran unsuccessfully in the last municipal election in November.

Two aldermanic positions are vacant because aldermen Dave Hill and Frank Waring are seeking the mayor's chair. Former mayor Jean Butler has resigned for health reasons. The nominations:

Mayor

Term ends November, 1980

Dave Hill, firefighter.
Frank Waring, business manager.

Alderman

One seat, term ending November 1980

Ed Gait, businessman.
Leona King, housewife.
Robert Smith, professional engineer.

Alderman

One seat, term ending November, 1981

Ruth Arnaud, homemaker co-ordinator.
Flemming Hansen, lawyer.
Ray Lamont, airline employee.

Obstetrics should stay, Sidney tells planners

Sidney council was not impressed Monday with an attempt by regional hospital planning representatives to justify the removal of obstetrics from Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

The representatives—Charles Perkins of Sooke and the region's hospital planner Murray Halkett—told council there were some good reasons to move all regional obstetric services to the Helmcken Road hospital planned for completion in 1982.

Halkett said the Saanich Peninsula Hospital did not have a "dedicated labor and delivery room."

Halkett said seven or eight cases of unpredicted high-risk deliveries a year could statistically occur at the peninsula hospital.

He suggested that moving obstetrics to the Helmcken hospital would reduce the chances, in a high-risk situation, of a baby becoming brain-damaged.

High-risk cases require fast medical attention by specially-trained physicians and nurses, Halkett said.

He said inconvenience was the price a majority of citizens must pay to "minimize deaths or brain-damaged conditions for the children of the minority."

Because of the relatively low number of deliveries at the peninsula hospital each year—about 150—physicians who deliver don't have the opportunity to keep their skills tuned, he said.

He said the peninsula hospital had about 300 births in two years and no deaths, but it referred predicted high-risk cases to Victoria hospitals. He said the average for Victoria hospitals is about seven deaths every 1,000 births.

Aldermen, led by Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey, told Halkett that peninsula residents, including some physicians, were against removing obstetrics from the Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

Rather than centralization, Sealey said she would like to see a small amount of money used to upgrade facilities at the peninsula hospital.

Sealey said health care at the peninsula hospital was not inferior to Victoria hospitals—"frankly, I find it superior."

Both Sealey and a number of aldermen said the hospital was warm, family-like, and convenient for local people.

When Halkett said it was difficult even for Victoria hospitals to get and keep highly-qualified specialists, Sealey replied that the Sidney area had the ideal "location and conditions" for such specialists.

Sealey said she didn't buy Halkett's argument that high-risk infants transferred to another hospital are likely to have serious complications.

She said: "With all due respect, I've read your report and I feel it's playing a little bit on emotions, and it unfairly suggests that someone who doesn't go along with (moving obstetrics to Helmcken) will be somehow responsible for brain-damaged children."

Sealey said the peninsula's population of 20,000 was projected to double by the end of the century.

Ald. Glenn McMillan said the removal of obstetrics to Helmcken Road would put restrictions on people living on the Saanich Peninsula.

Old ships irk admiral

Canada's naval officers feel like second-class citizens because the equipment they operate is so old, a top military officer told the Naval Officers' Association of Canada.

Rear-Admiral Michael Martin of Esquimalt, commander of Canada's Pacific fleet, said in a Winnipeg speech that the average age of Canada's naval ships is 17 years.

Construction of six new frigates would not be completed until at least 1986, and by then the oldest ship in the fleet would be 30 years old.

Martin, 52, who joined the navy 34 years ago, said 20 ships need replacing, and naval personnel should be expanded.

He said Canada's navy is designed to fight a war in the Atlantic Ocean, but now there was an increased threat in the Pacific Ocean.

"It is vital we spend money modernizing our ships not only to keep them seaworthy but to ensure that we can continue to support them until they are replaced," he said.

Canada's war fighting capability was hanging in the balance, he said, "and further delays, political or financial, will have a very bad effect on the over-all capability of our fleet and the morale of our sailors."

Martin said Canada is flying the oldest anti-submarine and ocean surveillance aircraft in the world.

The armed forces, he said, had suffered badly from financial cutbacks in terms of buying power in Canada's defence programs, "and as a result we are trying frantically to play catchup ball to replace old and aging vessels and equipment."

Martin said the greatest enemy to defence strength was inconsistency in policy —"something we in Canada have suffered throughout the history of our navy."

Canadians and their political leaders had refused to face reality and were reluctant to stick to any form of long-range planning, he said.

Every piece of equipment was important to Canada's national strength; reductions in personnel, cutbacks or delays even though they might not appear to affect the fighting forces, were insidious, Martin said.

"Deep down my judgment says that our naval forces are really inadequate and what we should be doing is embarking on a program to increase our naval posture, return it to the relative strength which existed in the mid-1960s, both in manpower and equipment."

Bennett pleased with vote result

Premier Bennett said Monday that he was pleased a majority government was returned in the federal election last week, and said he would press now for recognition of B.C.'s claim to offshore resources.

Bennett, just back from a Hawaii holiday, said that while he was not taking sides, he was pleased a government in Ottawa would not have to depend on a third party for support.

The premier said that in the past, Liberal governments had been reluctant to give control of offshore resources to the provinces.

Bennett said he was not unduly concerned over talk of Western separation from the rest of Canada, adding that he believed in a strong, united country.

Navy's history topic

A major conference on the history of the Royal Canadian Navy will be held at Royal Roads Military College next month to mark the 70th anniversary of the RCN.

The conference is designed to encourage historical research on the navy as well as the volunteer reserve and naval reserve by helping ex-naval personnel and historians share ideas and information.

The 17 papers to be presented cover RCN history from its Royal Navy origins through both world wars and the Korean conflict to unification.

Curtis 'showing flag' at Wall Street houses

Canadian Press

B.C.'s Finance Minister Hugh Curtis started a three-day "show-the-flag" visit to the New York financial community Monday, hoping to lay the groundwork for eventual provincial borrowing.

Curtis, who took over the finance portfolio last November, is holding a series of meetings with Wall Street investment houses and financial experts in what he described as a familiarization visit.

The minister painted a rosy picture of B.C.'s prospects for the next decade.

"I think we have an exciting story to tell with respect to British Columbia," he said in an interview in New York. "The reaction has been very favorable."

"With the change in portfolio last November, it seemed appropriate," he said of his visit. "Further, Larry Bell has just assumed the position of deputy minister, so therefore we are a new team. I felt I wanted to get here to establish contact."

Curtis also said he told American investment bankers and analysts he had talked to that B.C.'s economy was very healthy and that its future looked prosperous.

He told them the economy had made a strong recovery since the Social Credit party replaced the NDP in government in 1975, despite some tight budgets.

"Now we are in a position to use the natural wealth of the province to assist the private sector."

"I was asked what is the major problem facing British Columbia in the 1980s," he said. "Probably it is coping with the growth, accommodating the growth which all indicators suggest is coming to British Columbia."

He cited as an example that the province wanted to export its vast reserves of coal and planned major expansion of research and development in coal gasification.

"Thus far we've been very well received," he said. "We're not unknown to the New York financial community, but perhaps the extent of our growth and our prosperity is not fully understood. That's one of the underlying reasons for the visit."

While there are no immediate plans for the province to float a bond issue in New York, that prospect also played a role in his visit.

"At some point in the foreseeable future, British Columbia Hydro will undertake a bond issue," he said. "It is important, therefore, that the people with whom B.C. Hydro deals be fully briefed."

Rec centre head going

William Johnson, director of the Oak Bay recreation centre since it opened in 1975, leaves Friday to take over as director of parks and recreation in Powell River.

Johnson said in an interview Monday he was leaving with many regrets, but he added Powell River has a complex similar to Oak Bay's which "has never got off the ground.

"I feel the experience I have gained during a super five years at Oak Bay might help me to turn it around in Powell River."

The 33-year-old bachelor obtained a BA degree in recreation from the University of British Columbia in 1970, and came to Oak Bay from Port Alberni where he was assistant superintendent of recreation, in 1975.

Duncan Russell, superintendent of Oak Bay parks and recreation, was superintendent in Port Alberni at the time.

Johnson's position in Oak Bay will be advertised, and Russell said he is certain there will be many applications.

A farewell party sponsored by friends and coworkers will be held Friday afternoon.

Money Talk

A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"RRSP-in my name or my wife's?"

"My wife does voluntary work for a charity organization and has no taxable income. What would be the advantages of setting up an RRSP in her name, in addition to the one I already have in my own?"

In situations like yours, where there are differences in income earned, there are advantages to having the spouse with the higher income contribute to the RRSP of the spouse with the lower income. One of the main advantages is that on maturity, retirement income received from an RRSP is taxable in the hands of the plan owner.

In your case, if you split that taxable income between you and your wife, you can both benefit from the $1,000 annual exemption for retirement annuity payments. You may also gain from lower tax rates that you each pay on the retirement income. So, all in all, your combined after-tax income when you're retired can be boosted significantly.

A few things to note, though, before proceeding. First, remember that the sum of the contributions you're making must not amount to more than your personal maximum. Secondly, bear in mind that if you or your wife want to deregister the plan for anything other than the purchase of a retirement income annuity, the withdrawals will be applied to your income and taxed accordingly (to the extent of your contributions in the year of withdrawal and the two preceeding years). Thirdly, it goes without saying, that any money you contribute to your wife's RRSP then belongs by law to your wife.

Each couple's circumstances are, of course, different. At Montreal Trust we'll be pleased to explain how a spousal RRSP can be set up to meet your particular situation.

RRSP maximum contributions

"What's the maximum I can contribute to an RRSP in any one year?"

You don't say if you contribute to a company pension plan or not.

If you do, your contribution to your own RRSP, plus your personal contribution to your company pension plan, together may not exceed $3,500 or 20% of your earned income, whichever is the lesser.

If you don't belong to any company pension plan, you may deposit up to $5,500 or 20% of your earned income, whichever is the lesser.

If you have any questions about our services, write, call, or come in and see us at the address below.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market had a respite Monday from its recent hectic activity and investors took the opportunity to skim off some profits.

Analysts reported an uneventful day but for a sharp decline at New York. That triggered profit-taking among some major interlisted stocks, particularly within the energy and transportation groups.

Trading in shares of Teck Corp. resumed at the opening following a halt Friday. The company said it will pay a stock dividend of one class B share for each outstanding A and B share. Teck's A shares gained 3 to $42 and the B shares 1¾ to $40¾.

Calmer look taken at U.S. figures

Inflation surge doubted

TORONTO (CP) — Forecasts of a surging 18-per-cent inflation rate in the United States in 1980 with serious consequences for Canada's major industries are exaggerated, Canadian economists say.

However, the experts predicted a slight increase in inflation in both countries, while real economic growth in Canada is expected to fall below the average four per cent recorded over the last four years.

Ben Gestrin, vice-president and chief economist at Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said Saturday the U.S. practice of multiplying a single monthly increase by 12 to obtain an annual rate can be dangerous, "especially if people start believing the predictions to be true."

If wage demands and price projections are based on that figure, "there is a very real danger of a chaotic period in the economy."

He said he doubted the U.S. inflation rate would be much higher than last year's 13.3 per cent and forecast a Canadian rate this year of between 10 and 11 per cent, slightly higher than recent predictions because of sudden increases in housing and energy costs.

Bank of Nova Scotia economist Forrest Rogers also said the 18-per-cent figure was exaggerated. But he was concerned that the 1.5-per-cent rise in the consumer price index was higher than the one per cent that had been predicted.

He said the rise would mean higher prices in Canada for imported U.S. goods and materials.

Douglas Peters, vice-president and chief economist of the Toronto Dominion Bank, said he expected the inflation rate to be closer to 12 per cent in the U.S. and slightly lower in Canada.

He also forecast Canada's real economic growth would be less than one per cent.

Of the expected recession, Peters said "consumers have gone on spending, and this has meant the recession hasn't happened yet."

Ontario could harvest peanut crop

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians spend up to $50 million a year to buy imported peanuts, but this year, with the harvest of Canada's first commercial crop of peanuts, the situation should change.

Researchers at the University of Guelph, who have been trying for the last 10 years to find varieties of peanuts that can grow well in the province, believe that a belt in southern Ontario is suited for growing most or all of Canadian requirements.

The first commercial crop — about 300 acres — will be grown this summer in the tobacco belt around Simcoe, Ont.

Most Canadian imports came and still come from the southern United States.

After testing 3,600 varieties, the researchers narrowed their attention to about a dozen types of Spanish and Valencia nuts. At current prices, they would be worth about $400 a ton at the farm gate — not as much as tobacco but more than corn or wheat.

Stock Market Signals Bullish Times ahead.

Biggest Bull Market in History Could Occur in Next Five Years.

That is the opinion of Don Cormie, President of the $250-million Edmonton-based Principal Group. He has 25 years of experience and research to back him up.

Cormie has observed that stock prices and economic trends occur in recurring cycles. "Compared to real estate prices, North American stocks have not been as cheap, since 1921," says Cormie. "The eight year period following 1921 was the beginning of the last great bull market. During that time the Dow Jones Average went from 64 to 385."

Cormie believes today's stock prices could offer the same buying opportunity as in 1921. At that time the majority of investors were frantically buying real estate and gold and ignoring the stock market — except the few astute investors who saw the bargain basement prices of the stock market.

"The key to successful investing is to buy the bargains. Today, as in 1921, the majority of investors are still ignoring bargain basement prices in the stock markets. In fact stocks are still valued at historically low prices."

This straight forward philosophy is not idle speculation on Cormie's part. Principal Group's Investment Department maintains charts, graphs and computerized records that date back to the 1700's. Based on this data, Principal Group has become one of the rising stars among economic research and investment firms in Canada.

Principal Venture Fund Ltd. has increased over 3½ times after all fees, or 28.8% per year since January 1975. One thousand dollars invested then would have been worth $3,546 as of December 31, 1979. This fund emphasizes agressive capital appreciation.

Donald M. Cormie, Q.C. President

Principal Growth Fund has increased 168.4% after all fees in the last five years. One thousand dollars invested on December 31, 1974 would now be worth over $2684. with reinvestment of all distributions. This fund is eligible for RRSP investments.

Collective Mutual Fund Ltd., which stresses international blue chip companies, has increased 141.1% after all fees since January 1, 1975. That's a compound annual rate of return of 19.2%.

None of these returns are guaranteed, nor is there 100% certainty that the next bull cycle will be like the rest. But Principal has committed itself to a growth strategy that has been successful.

Why should you as an investor buy Principal's investment funds? When you do, you immediately share in the 25 years of research and investment expertise the company has developed. You buy the full-time, professional management of managers who know a bargain when they see one. You immediately buy the safety represented by the diversification of over 30 stocks each fund owns. You buy the accounting and tax reporting forms that the company provides. You make an investment with liquidity. And, your shares in the fund may be presented for redemption on any business day at their net asset value. Net asset value is reported daily in the major Canadian newspapers.

Can you afford to miss what could be the investment buying opportunity of this coming decade? For as little an investment of $600.00 or more you can buy and own the investment expertise of real professionals.

Whether you're a small or large investor phone us now for further information to get the whole story on why we think stocks are a bargain.

Alsands crews race thaw date

FORT MCMURRAY (CP) — Crews are working around the clock on the site of Alberta's third oil-sands project in an effort to finish preparatory work before the spring thaw.

The crews must finish clearing bush and digging 50 kilometres of drainage ditches before predicted first thaws April 1 or face the risk of heavy equipment sinking into the muskeg of northeastern Alberta.

The Alsands Group started work on the 3,500-acre plant and mine site 90 kilometres northeast of Fort McMurray Jan. 26 despite the lack of final government approval for the project.

Alsands officials decided not to wait because a one-year delay would have added substantially to the final cost of the $3.4-billion project.

Step two in the preparatory work starts next winter when the dried muskeg will be scraped off the ground to permit work on the foundation.

More than 400 test wells will make up the third part of the winter preparation program.

While Alsands is preparing the site the provincial government is going ahead with the on-again-off-again construction of a bridge and an all-weather road to the project site.

Access to the Alsands site now is restricted to barges across the Athabasca River and aircraft in the summer and in winter by vehicle over an ice bridge and a bumpy bush road.

The government started work on the bridge in 1978 and the contractor has struggled through two winters to sink pilings through the ice into the river bottom.

U.S. HOCKEY COACH Herb Brooks, with arms around a rather tired-looking daughter, speaks to well-wishers in Minneapolis Monday on arrival from Washington where he and other U.S. Olympians had lunched with President Carter. About 1,000 friends, relatives and fans were on hand to greet the Minnesota contingent. Brooks' team completed one of the biggest upsets in Olympic history by defeating Finland Sunday in the gold medal game.

Carter's guests oppose boycott

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter gave a hero's welcome to the U.S. Winter Olympic team Monday but was confronted with widespread opposition among the athletes to his call for a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow.

Carter conducted a colorful, emotion-filled pageant of praise at the White House for the athletes who competed in Lake Placid.

But after a luncheon given by the President and his wife, speed skater Eric Heiden said that almost all the members of the team had signed a petition opposing Carter's demand for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Heiden, who won five gold medals in speed skating and was personally hailed by the President moments earlier, said the athletes brought the petition with them. But he was unsure whether it was delivered to Carter.

"I don't think a boycott is the right thing," Heiden said. "I don't like politics in sport. It's hard on the people who have been training all their lives."

Carter called for the Moscow Games boycott as a protest against Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

In Monday's ceremony, the President repeated his pledge and said he would seek to provide alternative competition for the athletes.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has violated world peace and the principles of the Olympics," he said.

He said he would soon meet some of the athletes due to compete in the Summer Games to discuss organizing "an alternate world-class competition that will not harm Olympic principles or future Olympic games."

"We are often told there are no more heroes," Carter told a cheering crowd of government workers waving American flags. "But our Olympic athletes are heroes."

Carter told the athletes: "You've thrilled the entire nation and we are all grateful."

The President embraced Heiden and warmly greeted the American hockey team which upset the Soviet squad and went on to capture the gold medal.

"Eric Heiden's performance will be remembered for years to come," he told the crowd. He called the hockey victory perhaps the greatest upset in the history of sport.

Families Heiden, Wenzel advance Olympic cause

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — The 13th Winter Olympic Games may or may not have advanced the cause of welding international athletes into one family. But two families notably advanced the cause of the 13th Winter Olympic Games.

It was fitting that two of the flag bearers at Sunday's closing ceremony were speed skater Eric Heiden and Alpine skier Hanni Wenzel. For the Heidens of Wisconsin and the Wenzels of Liechtenstein were among the most active and successful competitors.

Heiden completed a sweep of the five men's speed-skating events Saturday by winning the 10,000 metres in world-record time, the only world mark to fall during the Games, and became the first athlete ever to mount the winner's rostrum five times in a single Winter Olympics.

Heiden's five golds and a bronze won by his sister Beth in the women's 3,000 metres represented half the entire medal bag of the United States team. The only other gold was won Sunday by the underdog U.S. hockey team.

Liechtenstein was even more indebted to the Wenzels: Hanni's victory in the slalom followed a triumph Thursday in the giant slalom, giving the tiny principality its first gold medals in Olympic competition.

Earlier, she had finished second in the downhill behind Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria. Only Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany in 1976 had previously won medals in all three Alpine disciplines.

Together with the silver won by Hanni's brother Andreas in the men's giant slalom, that made up Liechtenstein's total haul of medals.

Among the countries behind Liechtenstein in the medal table were the Netherlands, Switzerland, Italy, France, Czechoslovakia — and Canada.

The Canadians got a silver medal from Gaetan Boucher of Ste. Foy, Que., who chased Heiden home in the 1,000-metre speed-skating event, and a bronze from Steve Podborski of Toronto in men's downhill skiing.

That was down by one gold medal from the Canadian total in 1976 when unheralded Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., came from nowhere in the giant slalom to rob Mittermaier of an Alpine skiing sweep.

Kreiner was back this time, after four frustrating years on the World Cup circuit, and performed creditably in all three Alpine events, placing fifth in the downhill.

Ken Read of Calgary, one of the favorites in the men's downhill, appeared to have a chance of catching Leonhard Stock of Austria, the eventual gold medalist, when the binding of one of his skis broke and he was unable to complete his run.

Another unfortunate Canadian was 15-year-old Steve Collins of Thunder Bay, the youngest competitor in Saturday's 90-metre ski jump.

Still in contention for a medal aftar his first attempt, the sensational youngster had a tail wind on his second, reducing the lift a jumper needs to achieve his best distance. He dropped back to ninth in the field of 50 while Jouko Tourmanen of Finland, Hubert Neuper of Austria and a second Finn, Jari Puikkonen, jumped into a head wind for the top three placings.

Sunday's four-man bobsled winner was Meinhard Nehmer of East Germany, the Olympic defending champion, and Russian chances of defending the hockey title were gone before the Soviet team took the ice for its last game with Sweden.

Upset 4-3 by the U.S. Friday, the Russians needed a victory by Finland over the young team of American college players and a win of their own over the Swedes to finish in first place.

The Finns, whose 4-3 victory over Canada in the prelkminary round knocked the Canadians out of medal competition, did their best to oblige, leading the Americans after two periods, but eventually bowed 4-2. In the ensuing battle for the silver and bronze, the Russians beat Sweden 9-2.

The Games offered evidence of the growing strength and versatility of East Germany in winter sports. While the East Germans trailed the Russians 10-9 in gold medals, their total medal count was 23 to 22 for the Soviet Union and they led in the unofficial point standings, 181½ to 177½.

Traditionally strong in bobsled and luge, the East Germans challenged the Russians in cross-country skiing, picked up gold medals in the biathlon and figure skating and broke through for their first gold in speedskating.

The Russians, who had won 13 gold medals and 27 over-all at the last Olympics, were hit most severely in women's speed skating, where they won three of the four events in 1976 and only one of them this time.

There will be some changes

MOSCOW (Reuter) — "They were like old men," the burly middle-aged Russian woman said angrily. "There will have to be some changes made."

It was hard to believe she was talking about one of the Soviet Union's proudest institutions — its national hockey team.

Before last Friday night, the Soviet Union, winner of four straight Olympic gold medals, was considered the world's best team on the ice.

Then their squad faced a team of U.S. college boys at Lake Placid, whom they had crushed in a pre-Olympic exhibition match, and lost, 4-3.

The Americans, going on to beat Finland, 4-2, took the gold medal for the first time in 20 years.

Even after a weekend of events inside the Soviet Union that included a major political speech by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, elections to the Russian Federation's Supreme Soviet and Soviet Army and Navy Day, the memory of the defeat still burns in the minds of Muscovites.

One housewife, apparently repeating the opinions of her irate husband, said: "The coach will have to be changed — and most of the forward line too."

The fact that the Soviet side took the silver medal counts little in a nation where virtually everybody, from Brezhnev on down, is a passionate hockey fan used to seeing their team win.

There are signs already that there might be quick changes in the Soviet side in the wake of the upset defeat.

"Our team came to the Olympics insufficiently replenished with young talent," Tikhonov told Tass news agency.

The Soviet press has dealt generously with the Americans' win, heaping particular praise on the performance of U.S. goalie Jimmy Craig.

Dmitry Ryzhkov, hockey commentator for Sovietsky Sport, said the U.S. team deliberately allowed the Soviet team to fire long-range shots, confident that the 22-year-old Craig would handle them.

The Communist Youth newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, cautioned Soviet team planners against drastic changes in a team that over the years has built up a record of near invincibility.

But informed sources in the Soviet sporting world said they expected changes during the coming months.

Cougars host Bruins tonight

Victoria Cougars, out to make it 13 straight wins over New Westminster Bruins this season, will attempt to close the gap on Portland Winter Hawks tonight in Western Hockey League play at Memorial Arena.

Cougars trail the first-place Winter Hawks by three points in the Western Division race but have four games in hand.

And while they've had a relatively easy time with the Bruins, the Royal City squad is coming off a 4-3 overtime win Sunday over the visiting Regina Pats.

The Ernie McLean-coached Bruins were eliminated from playoff contention Saturday night, the first time McLean has missed post-season play since joining the league with Estevan in 1967.

Cougars are riding a five-game winning streak and have outscored the opposition 27-7 in that time.

Game time is 8 p.m.

In other Sunday play: Portland edged Brandon Wheat Kings 6-5 in the Manitoba city; Billings Bighorns ruined Vic Stasiuk's debut as coach of Lethbridge Broncos by scoring a 5-2 win and Calgary Wranglers ended a Saskatoon Blade win streak at five by romping to an 8-2 decision.

Halifax rink in lead

EDMONTON (CP) — The Colleen Jones rink of Halifax extended its unbeaten streak to five games Monday night with a last-end victory over Cathy Shaw of the Territories in the fifth round of the Canaidan women's curling championship.

Nova Scotia came back from a one-point deficit to score two in the final end to edge Shaw, a former Canadian champion when she represented Manitoba, 6-5.

The victory was one of three close decisions Monday night. Dorothy Crowe of St. Bruno, Que., stole a point in the final end to beat Denise Lavigne of Moncton 9-7, while Ontario, represented by Christine Bodogh of St Catharines, edged Donna Brownridge of Winnipeg 6-5.

In other fifth-round games, Joan Dexter of New Westminster picked up her second straight victory after three straight losses by defeating Marj Mitchell of Regina 10-6, and Alberta's Barb Davis of Lethbridge scored a 7-3 win over Sue Anne Bartlett of Labrador City, Nfld. Braves outbattle Gulls

Saanich Braves found time in between the battles to score five goals Monday as they scored their 37th victory in 38th South Island Junior "B" Hockey League games.

Tracy Patterson scored twice, Marty Irvine, Ron Brooks and Jamie Bowes scored once each as the Braves edged Juan de Fuca Gulls 5-2 in a fight-filled game at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

A fine goalkeeping performance by Mike Spiteri kept the Gulls close as the Braves held a 52-30 edge in shots.

The first period ended in a scoreless draw but the Braves led 3-0 after two periods.

Marty Wakelyn lost his shutout bid when Ian Fraser and Terry Coghlin scored in the third period.

There were six fighting majors handed out and a total of 180 minutes in penalties called.

Hot realtors clinch title

Guards Chris Trumpy and Quinn Groenhyde went on scoring binges as Henderson Realty clinched first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League Monday.

Trumpy scored 36 points, including 22 in the first half, and Groenhyde scored 35 points, 27 in the first half, as Henderson outscored Trilec Seniors 125-104 at Central Junior High School.

Robbie Parris added 18 points and Ken Shields scored 15 points for Henderson which led 74-52 at the break.

Bruce English scored 27 points for Trilec, Harbinder Sangarah scored 24 points and Daryl Johnson added 20 points.

Vancouver no match for Seasprays

Victoria Seasprays were expecting more competition Sunday. They got less.

The Vancouver entry in the new Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League put on a poor showing and the well-prepared Seasprays coasted to a 28-7 triumph before about 300 fans at Centennial Stadium.

Victoria had shelled Burnaby Lakers 26-5 in the league opener Saturday but despite the goals margin the Lakers put up a stiffer battle and provided a more entertaining contest than Vancouver.

Vancouver only dressed 13 players and two goaltenders, leaving them with only two reserves for attack and defence and they didn't bring the large six-foot sticks for their three defenders.

The Mainlanders were missing senior "A" starters, Taki Vohalis, Doug Hayes and Pat Differ. Vohalis was in hospital with a back problem, Hayes had rugby commitments and Differ was getting married.

Vancouver looked like it might make a fight of it in the early going. Seasprays led 6-2 after one quarter but were up only 8-5 midway through the second quarter.

Seasprays led 15-5 at the half and were in almost complete command in the second half when they held Vancouver to a handful of shots and two goals.

"My guys looked at their bench strenghth and decided it was going to be a cinch," said assistant coach Ed Kowalyk. "I don't go for that. I told them at half time we have to play with intensity regardless of what the other team is like. We owe it to the fans."

Kevin Alexander scored four goals and added three assists for the Shamrocks, Dennis Somner scored four times, Jeevan Dillon, Art Webster and Tarey Pollock scored three goals apiece, Bill Marechek had two goals and three assists, Andy Reid and Jim Lynch scored twice each and Larry Bell, Mike Thomas, Owen Richmnan and Gord Christians notched singles.

Randy Delmonico, Ray Richards and Darryl Aube scored twice each for Vancouver and Tony Vendasco scored once.

Vancouver was coming off a 14-13 loss to North Shore Indians in its league opener while in Sunday's other game Coquitlam showed it might provide some opposition for the Seasprays by downing the Lakers 17-9 at Burnaby.

Victoria travels to the Mainland next weekend for games Saturday in Vancouver and Sunday in Burnaby.

Hooligan jailed

BRISTOL, England (AP) — A soccer hooligan was jailed for four months and 26 others received heavy fines after scenes of violence at Saturday's English League match between Bristol Rovers and Chelsea. Chelsea fan Derek Hitchman, 22, was jailed after admitting a charge of threatening behavior. He had four previous convictions.

Mounted police were called in to deal with the Chelsea supporters, who were fighting before the match started. There was more trouble during the match, which Bristol Rovers won 3-0.

Bomber kicker resigns

WINNIPEG (CP) — Place-kicker Bernie Ruoff has resigned from Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Spokesman John Law said Ruoff submitted a letter of resignation to coach Ray Jauch Friday.

Ruoff, 1979 scoring leader in the CFL, has not commented on whether he intends to switch to the National Football League but several NFL teams had expressed interest in the 28-year-old athlete. Ruoff has been on the trading block since he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana. The offence brought him a three-month conditional discharge.

Even rival applauds Borg

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — Bjorn Borg routinely disposed of Vijay Amritraj, 7-5, 6-1, 6-3 and won the $100,000 first prize in the $200,000 WCT Invitational tennis tournament Sunday.

Borg played almost flawless tennis while remaining unbeaten in the six-man round-robin tournament. Borg served 11 aces and made some remarkable shots, some of which Amritraj applauded, along with the crowd.

Billie Jean trims Evonne

DETROIT (AP) — Veteran Billie Jean King defeated Evonne Goolagong Cawley, 6-3, 6-0, Sunday in the championship match of the $200,000 women's professional tennis tournament at Cobo Arena. King, the No. 2 seed in the tournament, simply overwhelmed top-seeded Goolagong, who was suffering from a pulled stomach muscle.

Spinks, Duran ring winners

Feisty Michael Spinks, brother of former heavyweight champion Leon, mercilessly peppered Ramon Ranquello's face and stopped him after six rounds Sunday in an Atlantic City bout.

And at Las Vegas, Roberto Duran, former world lightweight champion, used four powerful rights to take out Wellington Wheately at 44 seconds of the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round welterweight fight.

Canadian sets world record

TORONTO (CP) — Angella Taylor of Toronto set a world indoor record in the 200-metre race Sunday at the Canadian Track and Field Association's indoor championships. Taylor, 21, was timed in 23.15 seconds, breaking the previous mark by one-100ths of a second.

Waltrips compliments pucksters

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, dedicating his victory to the Olympic Gold Medal U.S. hockey team, won his second Grand National stock car race of the season Sunday with a close decision over Bobby Allison in the wreck-filled Richmond 400. Waltrip started on the pole, survived a slight collision with Richard Petty, went ahead for good on the 382nd lap and finished 1.2 seconds in front of Allison.

Simmer's return sparks Dionne and other mates

● Complete Sunday summaries — P. 18

Before left winger Simmer missed 16 games through injury, centre Dionne had averaged 2.08 points per game in the first half of the National Hockey League season. In Simmer's absence, Dionne dropped to 1.31 points per game.

There were no NHL games Monday and the Kings were idle Sunday but in other Sunday games: the Black Hawks upset Buffalo Sabres 3-1 at Chicago; Boston Bruins edged the Oilers 4-2 at Edmonton; New York Rangers blasted visiting New York Islanders 8-2; the Nordiques blanked Pittsburgh Penguins 2-0 in Quebec; Detroit Red Wings outscored visiting Minnesota North Stars 7-5; and Washington Capitals and Colorado Rockies played to a 1-1 draw at Denver.

Statistics released Monday show that in six games since Simmer returned, Dionne has an average of 1.83 points and the Kings, who were 3-12-1 in the games Simmer missed, have three victories and three losses.

Simmer has six goals and three assists in his last six games, giving him season totals of 42 goals, 36 assists and 78 points, good for sixth place in the scoring race.

Dionne leads the scoring parade with 115 points from 44 goals and 71 assists. Second-place right winger Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens has missed two games with a knee injury, may miss several more and has slipped nine points behind Dionne at 106 points, including 44 goals.

Centre Wayne Gretzky of Edmonton Oilers is third with 35 goals and 65 assists for 100 points. Gretzky, who was 19 last month, is the youngest player ever to earn 100 points in a season, surpassing the achievement of centre Pierre Larouche.

Larouche scored 111 points for Pittsburgh in the 1975-76 season when he was 21.

Dionne has 15 power-play goals to lead that category, and four players — right winger Mike Murphy of Los Angeles, right winger Reggie Leach and centre Rick MacLeish of Philadelphia Flyers and centre Larry Patey of St. Louis Blues — are tied for the lead in short-handed goals with three each.

● Sauve was in the nets Sunday and was beaten twice in the first period as the Black Hawks held a 31-15 edge in shots in the game.

● Gretzky managed only one assist against the Bruins who held period leads of 1-0 and 2-1 and were ahead 4-1 early in the third period.

● Islander coach Al Arbour was threatening demotions after the debacle at New York. The Rangers took a 5-0 lead in the second period and went on to hand the Islanders their fifth straight loss.

● Pittsburgh held a wide edge in play at Quebec but Nordique goaltender Michel Dion was spectacular and kicked out 33 shots for the shutout. Quebec managed only 18 shots at the Pittsburgh goal but Jamie Hislop scored twice in the third period, once into an empty net.

Schmautz back with Cherry

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers and Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League have made a one-for-one trade that will see Bobby Schmautz again playing for coach Don Cherry.

Perennial mates earn pin crown

It was a long time coming but Lorna Pollock and Edy Cockle have the titles they've been seeking for more years than they care to remember.

Pollock, a B.C. bowling hall-of-famer, rolled a sensational 692 series Sunday at Mayfair Lanes and perennial partner Cockle fashioned a 553 as the pair captured the scratch and handicap doubles titles of the 39th annual Victoria Women's Tenpin Championships.

Mo King rolled 608 to take scratch singles honors, junior graduate Teresa Davidson bowled 544-162—706 to win the handicap singles in her first adult tournament while Marlene Mitchell bowled 1712 scratch to wrest the all-events crown from Pollock. Bertha Saxby won the handicap all-events with 1663-378—2041.

"We've been after this for a long time said," Pollock said Monday. "So long I can't remember when we started."

Pollock has numerous city and Canadian titles to her credit but particularly wanted to win the doubles because of her long friendship with Cockle.

"Edy's thrilled too. I don't think she's come down yet." said Pollock.

Both the scratch (1245) and handicap (1411) are tournament records and Pollock's 692 is the highest women's tenpin series rolled in Victoria since Dolly Hume bowled 713 in 1943.

Pollock, who has a 183 average in the best of her three leagues, started with a blow in the first frame of the opening game but fought back for a 189. She started the second game with a spare then followed with eight strikes as she chalked up a 267 and she had a five-timer in her final game of 237.

Cockle also bowled well above her average which is 154. She opened with 201 and followed with steady games of 171 and 177.

Mitchell rolled 546 in the team event, 601 in the doubles and 565 in the singles while Saxby rolled 497 in the team event, 618 in the doubles and 548 in the singles.

Shack twirls handlebars during visit here

Old Stars coming for March game

They're the National Hockey League Old Stars, a new Toronto-based group of former professionals, and they'll make an first appearance in Victoria on Friday, March 14.

That's when Victoria Kinks (formerly Racquet Club Kings) will provide the opposition for an 8 p.m. game at Memorial Arena.

And the locals will have their hands full.

An advance party, including former Toronto Maple Leaf stars Bob Nevin and Eddie Shack, was here Monday and manager-coach Ross Brewitt said there will be at least 16 former NHLers in the lineup "and they're all drawing NHL pensions. There's no one with us who only had a cup of coffee with some NHL team".

Besides the well-travelled Nevin and Shack, who both saw action with Los Angeles Kings and New York Rangers during their varied careers, the Old Star lineup includes ex-Leafs Frank Mahovlich, Mike Pelyk, Norm Ullman, Andy Bathgate, Jim Pappin and goalkeeper Marv Edwards.

Also lacing up the skates for the Old Stars are Hall of Famer Harry Howell (Rangers, Kings), Pierre Pilote (Chicago Black Hawks), Larry Carriere (Buffalo Sabres, Vancouver Canucks), Dennis Hull (Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit), Dean Prentice (Rangers, Minnesota North Stars, Boston Bruins, Detroit, Pittsburgh), George Morrison (St. Louis Blues), Bob Wall (Detroit, Los Angeles, St. Louis) and Keith McCreary (Pittsburgh, Montreal Canadiens).

A result of a plan formulated in Shack's recreation room one evening, the Old Stars are touring Canada and playing a limited number of games.

They'll be in Vancouver on March 16 to play the Vancouver Canuck Oldtimers as a feature of the annual Western Canada Oldtimers tournament, an event staged here in 1978 and 1979.

The success of the Victoria tournaments and the succeeding Pacific Cup event this year prompted the national oldtimers association to set up the March 14 game.

The Kinks aren't in the same class as the ex-pros but they won the "C" Division last year at the international oldtimers championships in Tokyo and were third in the "D" event at the Pacific Cup.

The 19-member squad has its sights set on Edinburgh, Scotland and the international tournament this year and net proceeds of the game will be shared on a 50-50 basis by the Kinks and the COHA.

"We get an honorarium of about $100 a game," said Nevin, a Maple Leaf during the 1962-63 Stanley Cup years who was traded to the Rangers in a seven-player deal three months before Toronto made it three Cups in a row. "We're putting on a show, entertaining hockey without slapshots and bodychecks, and we've been well received so far."

HOW DOES A TUNE-UP SAVE YOU GASOLINE?
The engine is the power system of your car. When all parts function according to technical specification, your car runs with planned efficiency.
Naturally, engines "dirty up" through normal use. For example, a dirty air filter can waste up to 10% of your gasoline just trying to breathe. A faulty spark plug, or high tension wire can lose you another 8%, and an improperly adjusted choke can waste up to 30% of your gasoline.
These are just a few examples of gasoline waste that can be spotted by our "Gas Saver" tune-up. See your participating Texaco retailer for full details. The 15 point tune-up is guaranteed for the lesser of 90 days or 5 000 km and price apply to most passenger cars.
The "Gas Saver" tune-up is another example of how your Texaco retailer is helping you save.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Watson figures he must win a United States Open golf championship to be classed with Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Sam Snead.

"I have won tournaments, but I feel that's what it takes," Watson said Sunday after winning the Los Angeles Open. "Anyone who can win 10 per cent of his tournaments is doing exceptionally well."

Watson won two of the seven PGA tour events he played this season on the Western swing.

With his $45,000 win here, Watson has won $106,525 in less than two months.

He won $462,636 last year, a PGA record and has a total of $1,777,958 for his 10-year pro career.

Watson bogeyed the 13th hole to fall into a tie with Bob Gilder, and Don January, 50, sank a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe at the 15th to make it a three-way deadlock.

Watson finished one group ahead of January and Gilder and he scored a routine par four on the 454-yard final hole of the 7,029, par 35-36 Riviera course.

Gilder came up to the 18th green and hit a par putt he figured would go left, but it went right. So, he missed the eight-footer and had to settle for $22,000. January collected the same because his second shot hit a tree and he missed a 20-foot putt trying for a par.

Watson's tournament total was 276 after a 71 Sunday. Gilder came in with a 73 and January a 71 to tie at 277.

At 282, tied for fourth, were Johnny Miller, 71, George Archer, 72, Hale Irwin, 73, Tom Weiskopf, 72, John Fought, 72, Fuzzy Zoeller, 70, Lanny Wadkins, 69, Gil Morgan, 71, and Jay Haas, 72.

Canadian Dan Halldorson of Brandon finished with 283 — the same aggregate as Jack Nicklaus — after shooting a fine 67 on his last tour around the course.

RCMP said Skuse, 40, was a passenger in a car driven by apprentice jockey Ronald Bilodeau, 22. Police said the car left the road and plunged 10 metres down an embankment, landing upside down in a creek.

Bilodeau, who has spent the last two years riding at Exhibition Park and on the Interior circuit, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

His best year was 1960 when he rode 231 winners, fifth best in North America.

Delesalle tops trials

TORONTO (CP) — Philip Delesalle of Victoria dominated competition during the weekend at a gymnastics meet to select Canada's team for the 1980 Olympic Games. There is a second qualifying meet, in May at Alma, Que., although the gymnasts still don't know if Canada will be sending athletes to Moscow.

Delesalle, 21, placed first over-all after optional and compulsory routines. He was first on every apparatus except the high bar, won by Jean Choquette of Montreal who was second over-all. Third was Marc Eppreht of Toronto followed by Marty Sharpe, a native of Winnipeg, Nigel Rothwell of Windsor and Owen Walstrom of Victoria.

Canada's best male gymnast works on a maintenance crew at a sawmill in Port Alberni. Part of his work day includes lugging 60-pound blocks of wood which, he adds, might come in handy.

"If I don't get to go to the Olympics after working toward it for four years, I'll throw some of those 60-pound blocks from Port Alberni to Ottawa."

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet swimmer Vladimir Salnikov improved his own 400-metre freestyle world record at the Soviet Union swimming championsips in Leningrad on Sunday. Salnikov's time of three minutes 51.20 seconds clipped two-tenths of a second off his previous best.

Hubby helped

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner credits a putting tip from her husband for the turnaround on the back nine that gave her a one-stroke win over Sandra Post in the Ladies Professional Golf Association $100,000 Bent Tree Classic.

Carner had trouble putting early in Sunday's final round, touring the front nine in one-over par. But she fired three birdies on the back side to finish with a three-under 69 and a tournament total of 280. The victory was worth $15,000.

"I made a slight putting change on that green (No. 10) and that's what got me going," she said. "My husband is a fabulous putting teacher so I had him look at me and he said I had my hands too far in front of the putter. On the 10th, I put my hands way to the right and it really felt good."

Post, who started Sunday's final round tied with Carner at five-under-par, finished second at 281. There was a three-way tie for third at 282 between defending champion Sally Little, 1979 LPGA rookie of the year Beth Daniel and Janet Coles.

Canadian Cathy Shirk finished at 304.

TEACH IT EARLY, SAY EXPERTS

By J.C. BARDEN
Colonist—N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — At a time when children become brand-name consumers before outgrowing their diapers, many parents are struggling to teach the lessons of thrift and the value of money. The experts advise a twofold approach. Consumer education, they say, should start as soon as children can sit up in a grocery cart and be followed up with a no-strings-attached allowance.

The key to teaching children that money is an economic tool of limited supply is to start the learning process young, according to psychologists and consumer educators with special interests in children. This is particularly important, they say, in an age of pervasive television commercials, early peer pressure and high inflation. What has made the concept of money so hard for children to grasp today is that they are just as likely to see cheques, coupons and credit cards exchanged for goods and services as they are cash.

"IT USED TO BE THAT children could see absolute, concrete examples of how money was acquired and used," said Dr. Alice Honig, associate professor of child development at Syracuse University. "They saw their fathers grow crops, they went with them when they sold the produce and bought goods. But from a child's point of view today, the economy works like magic, with paper and plastic as the wand for toys and clothes."

This us why children need to learn about thrift "at the earliest age," Dr. Honig said.

"Show and talk with your children to let them know that products are chosen for economy," she said. " 'Mommy is buying this soup today because it's on sale. We can have four of these for the same price we would pay for two of these. We are buying this milk because mommy has a coupon that makes it 30 cents less than what it costs normally.' "

A COLLEAGUE OF DR. HONIG, Dr. Margaret Charters, professor of consumer economics, believes that even preschool children should participate in shopping decisions. "Parents should discuss the alternatives with the children," she said. What can we get the most of for our money tonight — hamburger, roast, chicken? This way they will see that there are a small amount of resources, and decisions are to be made about how to use them."

Professionals have a few strict guidelines for parents if an allowance is to be a valuable tool. They say it must be given on a regular basis and that parents have to be specific about what the money is expected to cover — luxury items, leisure-time entertainment, maybe some clothing — but should not tell the children precisely what items to buy.

Dr. Thomas Gordon, a California psychologist who conceived the Parent Effectiveness Training clinics, said the allowance should be started at three or four years old. "Starting the allowance early is important," he said, "so that they can begin to grasp the concept of money — exchanging a quarter for a bar of candy — and assuming the responsibility for pleasures. If they want a candy bar and they don't have any money, they don't get the candy."

FOR THE FIRST FEW YEARS, most of the psychologists and professors agreed, an allowance should be for luxury items only. For many youngsters, it can continue to be for luxuries and leisure-time activities through high school and still be effective. Some parents may want to expand the children's responsibilities as they grow older. This, like the amount, depends on the individual youngster and the family's situation.

What is important, the professionals say, is that the parents sit down with the children and explain what the family's earned income is being used for and how much money is available to the child. Then the allowance should not be supplemented.

"If a child blows his money," Dr. Honig said, "and grandma or grandpa bails him out, or he can play mommy off against daddy for more money, what he's learning is how to con people."

MOST PSYCHOLOGISTS AND educators agree that the allowance should be given as a child's share of the family income, not as something that he must earn by making his bed daily and cleaning his room. He should be doing these chores as a responsible member of the family, they believe, and the allowance should not be withheld if a child fails to do them.

Dr. Chester J. Brodnicki of the nonprofit Child and Family Services Agency of Hartford said: "By taking away a child's allowance, parents are tying his sense of worth to money. But this is easier for most parents than dealing with the issue of the child being a responsible member of the family."

A dissenter is Dr. Salvatore Didato of the nonprofit Family Life Institute of Westchester (N.Y.) "A child should be given an allowance like a reward for cleaning up the room or raking leaves," he said. "If a child does not do this, he should be told about it and corrected. Withholding the allowance or cutting down on it is one way of doing this."

NEARLY ALL OF THE EXPERTS interviewed had children who had been reared early on the economic principles espoused by their parents, and all the parents were pleased with the results. But it is never too late to institute a home course in economics, and necessity can be a good teacher, they said.

An example is Dr. Lilla Lyon, who works in public health in New York City. She was 13 when her parents put her on a strict allowance, including money for her clothes. Two years later, her parents moved to Germany (her father was in the Foreign Service) while she stayed at her boarding school and received a monthly allowance.

Two zebra swimsuits from the Gottex of Israel collection for fashion jungle

A REAL WILD ALTERNATIVE

It's back to jungle

MONTREAL — Leopards, tigers, zebras and reptiles are all threatening to get into the swim of things this year if the fashion dudes have their way.

Slithering and snaking their way along beaches and pools, they offer a wild look alternative to the flora and fauna of the regulars.

Classic maillots have necklines that dive to a new low and leg lines that curve to the hip bone.

Gals watchout, too. None does anything to correct or camouflage any figure faults. That kind of thinking seems to be the forte of the physical fitness buffs alone.

The rascally burr in britches of our complacency is back

OTTAWA (CP) — Thirty-odd years ago a group of rascally Toronto entertainers set out to poke fun in skits, songs and dances at Canada's holy establishments—Ottawa, Mounties and Saturday night hockey, for a start.

They sang We All Hate Toronto, and times haven't changed much since. They mocked grand opera in La Traviesti and Canadian ballet's Red Ear of Corn.

They were the Spring Thaw company, and as the years went by they were joined by Dave Broadfoot, Barbara Hamilton, Paul Kligman, Anna Russel, Rich Little, Robert Goulet and others less known.

They began one of the longest-running and fondest-remembered shows in the winter of 1947-48, and through their successors kept it up until 1971. Only the First World War army entertainment troup The Dumbells could top them with the latter's international touring activity.

Now they are returning, with a 5½-week tour starting next month from St. John's, Nfld., to Victoria, via Cold Lake, Alta., and back to the National Arts Centre here in August.

The original Spring Thaw started with the New Play Society in Toronto when it had to put together a show quickly to replace one on its playbill that failed to come together. It became the immediate hit of the season, destined for renewal each year just as spring renews this frozen land.

The late Dora Mavor Moore launched the New Play Society, of which Don Harron has written that it was never quite clear to him whether it was a new society to put on plays; or a society to put on new plays. It did classical and new Canadian works.

But whatever it was, it spawned Spring Thaw, and her son, Mavor took over the direction and acquired rights to the name. One of the country's most versatile men of the theatre, as writer, actor, director, producer and professor, he now is chairman of the federal arts grants agency, the Canada Council.

Spring Thaw, like spring weather, went through many changes of form. But clearly its most successful—and the one being revived—was the satirical topical review.

Through the years, its list of scriptwriters and other contributors read like a Who's Who: Lister Sinclair, Lucio Agostini, Tommy Tweed, Murray Cherkover, Pierre Berton, Godfrey Ridout, Wayne and Shuster, Eric Nicol and Robert Fulford—names now held in such awe by many that they themselves could become targets for Spring Thaw barbs, and may be.

Don Harron, now host of the CBC's morning radio network show, created his Parry Sound farmer, Charlie Farquharson, just to fill in a four-minute gap in the Spring Thaw script one season, and Charlie has been with us in written and spoken words, and in television, ever since.

If Canadians had a reputation among themselves and abroad as being a dour, unfunny lot, they laughed at Spring Thaw and soon found they had a lot to laugh at among themselves. Such a wave of laughter spread across the country that one might well believe, in those days, that a country that laughs together stays together.

Mavor Moore, now on a Canada Council mission to Europe to sign a cultural protocol with Switzerland and find out how Austria subsidizes the high art of Vienna, says he hasn't been directly involved in the new Spring Thaw.

He leased his rights to Allan Gordon, one of the writers of Spring Thaw skits in the 1950s, with confidence that the new company will strive to match the flavor of the old.

'THE ULTIMATE MALE MACHO IMAGE — VERY APPEALING'

This gigolo unsettling image of 80s

"IT'S THE ULTIMATE MALE macho image. It's very appealing to those who are turned off by the attention given the gay lifestyle. It's a reinforcement of heterosexuality."

And the infatuation with the character played by Richard Gere is likely to spawn a number of imitators.

"When I was young, we all wanted to talk like Humphrey Bogart," said psychologist Hy Day.

"THIS NEW FAD WILL MAKE a change from all the John Travoltas that have been walking around for two years.

"Most people know it's make believe. They're just young people looking for a role model and it's not easy to find one in this confusing world.

Eddie Kalish, head of publicity at Paramount, says he finds it natural that people are so influenced by motion pictures.

"IT'S THE MOST POWERFUL medium," he said. "You sit in a darkened room watching larger-than-life films, with total focus, no distractions.

"You become enveloped in the film's atmosphere and come away with incredibly strong impressions and, sometimes, aroused emotions."

Kalish said in a telephone interview from New York that Travolta, like James Dean in the 1950s was someone teenagers could identify with.

"BUT GIGOLO IS PURE escapism. It's total fantasy. People can't identify with him; he's out of their world, a whole new image. I think that's why it's taking off the way it is."

"That's certainly, part of it," said psychiatrist Daniel Cappon.

BUT IF THE CHARACTER PORTRAYED by Gere is the perfect male for some, others are concerned.

"It's too bad society can't come up with a more elevating symbol for today's youth than a whore," said Ernest Smith, a Los Angeles pediatrician who was one of a group of parents who lobbied to have The Warriors withdrawn from ciruculation in that city.

"The easy-going Gigolo is the last role model young men need today," Smith said.

"There's enough sexual confusion in young people's lives to start with. They don't need a slick, greedy machine to emulate."

However, Potvin believes in a self-righting mechanism in society.

"THE GIGOLO THING MAY be a passing fancy or stage with some impressionable young men," he said. "They may look like the film's hero, dress like him, walk like him, but I don't think they're going to go out and become male hookers."

But as one young man said after seeing the film: "Being a gigolo is better than pumping gas."

Virginity as appendix: A psychiatrist's view

SHEFFIELD, Mass. (AP) — At 70, the author and psychiatrist who calls herself "a member of the first generation of sexual revolutionaries" says more parents are coming around to her conclusion: "Virginity is about as useful as your appendix."

"It used to be that a man wanted his wife to be a virgin when they married, says Eleanor Hamilton, a sex counsellor who has lectured Americans for 40 years about premarital sex. "These days, I don't know of any young man who would marry one."

SITTING IN THE LIVING room of the comfortable, rustic cottage she designed in the Berkshire Hills, Mrs. Hamilton talked about her career and the theories she has expounded in five books and several national television appearances.

What's wrong, she was asked, with marrying a virgin?

"The average age for sexual maturation has gone from 14 down to 12," Mrs. Hamilton replied, "and for marriage from 18 up to 22. That's a 10-year span. Sexuality is a primary function. Put it on the shelf like that and you have an 80-per-cent chance of dysfunction."

HENCE, HER recommendation that potential marriage partners get to know each other by living together first. "You don't know anyone until you live with them. If one of my children wanted to get married to someone they hadn't lived with, I'd crack 'em," she laughed.

She says she's against sexual relations for those under 15 but considers it okay at "around 16."

Mrs. Hamilton's liberal world view took shape in Oregon, where she was born and brought up. "I always knew I'd have a career, even in the '20s. We didn't need women's liberation then."

AFTER COLLEGE SHE came East with her husband, a New York City psychiatrist and began raising a family that eventually included four children. When her husband suffered a heart attack the family moved here and Mrs. Hamilton began marriage counselling.

The determined assault she has waged on mainstream sexual morality in the 25 years since has done little to ingratiate the grandmotherly Mrs. Hamilton with her neighbors in this quiet, rural town.

Despite her prominence, she never has been asked to speak in local schools. "I suppose I'm a prophet without honor in her own country," she says. "But it doesn't bug me anymore."

AREA RESIDENTS still recall the commotion Mrs. Hamilton caused 10 years ago with a speech entitled Sex Before Marriage before a group of Berkshire County ministers.

"I'm sure they expected me to say, 'Don't do it'," she says.

Although most of the ministers accepted her views with pastoral calm, the next day a newspaper carried an account of her talk that was headlined, "Noted Psychologist Advocates Sex at an Early Age."

THE TELEPHONE RANG and the mail flowed in. "New England knew how to deal with its witches," one anonymous caller told her. Others promised to pray for her soul.

"It was scary," she recalls, explaining why she hired a night watchman to protect her family.

Mrs. Hamilton says such intimacy is encouraged at her summer camp in Nova Scotia for children ages eight to 16. "We've never had a pregnancy," she boasts.

SHAPE UP FOR SPRING WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Vitamin A	Vitamin E	Vitamin C	Vitamin D
Thiamin	Riboflavin	Niacin B6, B12	Folid Acid Blotin
Choline	Calcium	Phosphorous	Iron
Iodine	Magnesium	Copper	Zinc
Potassium	Manganese	Sodium	d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote you last year and you didn't print my letter. Are you swamped? I'll try one more time.

Why should a woman give her hairdresser a tip? Heaven knows it costs enough to go to the beauty shop these days without adding another $1 or $2 or $3.

In my opinion, beauticians are professionals and should not accept tips. They aren't in the same category with waitresses, bellmen in hotels, skycaps at airports or doormen who get taxis during rush hour or in bad weather.

Will you please deal with this in your column? I believe you are a fair-minded person and I would respect your opinion. —Corpus Christi Reader

Dear Corp: I handed your letter to Brian Blanchard, my hairdresser (who I always tip). Here is his reply:

A woman who has her hair done in a beauty salon should not feel obligated to tip. A tip is a gesture of appreciation for a personal service well done. Granted, the price of hairdressing has gone up, like everything else, but most hairdressers work on commission and do not see much of that increase. (It goes to the owner of the shop.) While a tip is greatly appreciated, one should not feel that it is necessary.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm awfully late with this letter, but I decided not to mail it until I was sure I wanted to. Well, today I'm sure. It's my response to the man who said, "A female can engage in sex anytime. All she has to do is be there. With a man it's different. He must be in the mood."

America's bedrooms are full of his kind of scum. The scene is commonplace. The woman is desperate for a few hours' sleep between baby-feedings, or she's pregnant, or ill, or upset by something her husband has said or done. Nothing matters but the man's urgency. Many women can testify to the pain that accompanies intercourse when she is physically or psychologically unprepared.

Why doesn't she refuse? Because she figures, "I might as well agree. He'll pester me until I do." Or, "When I say no, he pouts like a child." Or, "He'll get angry and punish me with his chequebook."

As for the clod's implied threat, "If you aren't willing I can go elsewhere because there's a huge surplus of women over 35, eager and waiting" — well, that statement really tells where he's coming from — and it's Nowheresville. —Been There In Topeka

Dear Topeka: Thanks for coming back to report. Loved your letter. It's a beaut.

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in your list of things to look for in a nursing home. I have worked in a few and would like to add one more suggestion.

Ask to read the menus for two or three weeks. Be on hand at mealtime to see how residents are served and if the food is appetizing. To people who don't have a great deal to look forward to, breakfast, lunch and dinner can be very important. —An RN

Dear RN: You are right on. Thanks for the additional suggestion. It's of prime importance.

Beware dangers of depression

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: Do you think it's possible for loneliness to kill a person? I'm a widow and have been for almost two years. I live alone and cannot cope with it. I don't see my children too often. I keep losing weight and am very weak all the time. I have a good appetite, but don't eat as much as I did when I was eating with someone. Please tell me if depression could cause all this. I am a diabetic, but am not on insulin. —Mrs. A.D.

Depression and loneliness can affect health very adversely. Your letter is very touching. Normally, it would be difficult to be "clinical" in response to such complaints as yours, but your diabetes does raise very definite medical suggestions.

You are a diabetic and are not on insulin. In any event, as you must know, diet is important in diabetes control. If you have fallen away from your previous diet regimen, this might seriously alter matters. This should be investigated promptly.

I wish you had given me your address so that I could suggest some of the social services available in your city. Even though you may not feel like doing so, you must try to get more active socially. Most hospitals welcome volunteers, who perform valuable services. You might try that. At least it will help you meet other people. You'll even find nice folks to eat with.

Depression and loneliness will not of themselves "kill" anyone. But what flows from those conditions, as your apparent lack of concern for your diet, might.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I wonder how you feel about the idea of a person having his cholesterol count checked regularly once a year. I am in my late 30s. I am referring to the fact that cholesterol seems involved in heart disease. There is history of heart trouble in my family. —D.L.

There is still some argument about whether a cholesterol level alone is an overriding factor in development of heart disease. If cholesterol is a factor, it is only one of several involved. It does seem wise, however, to try to keep the cholesterol as low as possible through diet and sensible exercise. This would be especially true for you because of your family history of heart disease, and particularly if cholesterol levels and hardening of arteries were involved. A once-a-year check is reasonable for people with the problem.

You should also pay attention to other means of prevention of heart attacks — no cigarette smoking, keeping your blood pressure within safe limits, losing excess weight and keeping physically active.

Dear Dr. Donohue: In discussing bedsores you did not mention granulated sugar as a cure. Why not? I have heard about it for years. — Mrs. R.R.

I didn't mention it for two reasons: (1) There are better methods, and (2) I'm not crazy about the sugar trick anyway. It is messy and may, in fact, set up an environment for bacteria to grow. If it has to be used for lack of any other available measure, the sugar is sprinkled on and the sore covered with a sterile bandage daily until it heals.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 50 plus and in good health. My fingernails split and peel. They split down the centre no matter how I cut them. I put nail polish on them, but it doesn't help. —J.B.

The polish won't help, and it can hurt. Try eliminating all cosmetics on the fingernails for a month or two. You may find improvement.

Salesmen tick talkers

Sellathon is TV conversation marketplace

Colonist-Los Angeles Times service

SAN FRANCISCO — A salesman here said to a station manager: "I tell you this show is gonna run in your market. It's gonna clean up. This is a show," said the salesman, his voice lowering to a whisper, "that you'd be proud to run on your station."

The scene is from this week's National Association of Television Program Executives convention here at a downtown hotel. It's the TV industry's annual syndicated program sellathon, where deals are made to fill local air time.

AND THE ABOVE transaction concerns a syndicated talk show, the convention's most talked-about item. There are a dozen or so talk or talk-variety series for sale, an unusually large number. They range from such senior talkers as Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas and Dinah Shore, whose best blabbing days some say are over, to hopeful newcomers Toni Tennille, John Davidson and Bert Convy, whose backers describe them as likeable, talented and—here's the key word—young.

LIKE NEWLY hatched turtles scrambling toward the surf, few new shows make it. Of the talk shows on the market, industry-leading Donahue, The Merv Griffin Show, The Toni Tennille Show, The John Davidson Show and possibly the Douglas and Shore shows are certain to start.

Meanwhile, syndicators and distributors are showcasing their products and, when the opportunity arises, speaking impolitely of the competition.

"Dinah, Mike and Merv, bless them," said Hal Cranton, vice-president in charge of advertising and promotion for MCA TV, "but they're getting older and their audience is getting older. The research is irrefutable."

Tennille

Davidson
. . . low-rated on Tonight

MCA TV HAS sold the 90-minute Tennille show as an afternoon strip on NBC's five owned stations. "She's had No. 1 hits on the charts. She's a headliner, not a lounge act. She's had her own TV special. None of the other guys (hosts) have had their own TV specials," said Cranton.

Mike Douglas, dropped by Group W Productions in favor of the younger Davidson, is now distributed by Syndicast Services, whose executive vice-president Len Koch promises the show is a definite go for the fall. "That stuff about Mike's audience is ----," says Koch. "It's getting older, but. . ."

GETTING DOWN to business, he added, "Davidson was the lowest-rated of the Carson hosts. And his TV Q (an industry popularity test) is big with older ladies." As for Tennille, Koch adds, "Doing five shows, 90 minutes a day, how different can it be? Is Toni capable of asking questions? Is she capable of listening? Nobody knows."

Twentieth Century-Fox is promising a fall launch for a "young and upbeat" Dinah show, despite its dreary ratings. The word from her people is that none of the other hosts can do what Dinah does. "John Davidson is very charming," says one, "but can you see him discussing with women their fashions and what their problems are?" The question, would you want to?

ONWARD. "Our show is gonna have more energy and we have a younger master of ceremonies," says Jack Barry of Barry & Enright, which is trying to get The Bert Convy Show on the air. Everything is still tentative.

Convy is a singer, actor, veteran talker and "a helluva good-looking guy" who appeals to women from 20 to 40, says Barry, a veteran TV personality himself who believes in Convy. "I don't think that John Davidson—as good as he is—can act and perform as Bert Convy does."

Next, to Metromedia Producers Corp., which in addition to the Griffin show is pitching a new talk series hosted by Jerry Van Dyke, who said, "I've reached the stage in my career when I don't want this to sell for the money or for the fame. I want it to sell for revenge."

VAN DYKE'S show, with its heavy dose of animal guests, would seem to project the kind of kid appeal keyed to late afternoon. "I don't care what anybody else tells you about when a show is made for," said Jon Ross, executive producer for MPC. "It's made for whenever we can sell it."

Van Dyke's chances of getting on? "The same as any new show," says Ross. "One in 10."

Besides the Davidson show, Group W is marketing a talk-feature mix called Hour Magazine, hosted by Gary Collins. Group W says Collins meets the criteria its research shows viewers want in a host.

"WHAT THE world needs most is a host with curly hair," says David Fein, executive producer of The Steve Edwards Show, with a straight face. Edwards has curly hair, and another show, Two on the Town, which he co-hosts.

Why the glut of syndicated talk shows? "Greed," replies Fein. According to one veteran syndicator, "A good successful show like Griffin's could well after expenses produce $6 million to $8 millon a year."

Those are exotic figures for Maurice H. Zowary, president of TV National, who is pitching That Joan Rivers Show. The catch is that the 260 half-hours were made in 1969. Zowary is undaunted.

"TEN YEARS earlier, these guests were younger and more vibrant than today (some are dead today)," he argues. "Joan Rivers doesn't look so hot on Hollywood Squares these days, but then she was cute."

And don't worry about the outdated fashions, he said, about Rivers' mid-thigh hemlines, "because miniskirts are coming back."

EXTENSION OF SERVICE TO NORTHERN AND REMOTE COMMUNITIES: NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETINGS

In its Public Announcement of January 8, 1980, the Commission announced the formation of a committee which will issue a report on how the number of television services to northern and remote communities in Canada might best and most expeditiously be increased and be more varied. It was also stated in the Announcement that the Committee would conduct a public meeting in the National Capital Region commencing 25 March 1980 and additional public meetings in one or more other locations in Canada, particularly in the North.

The Meeting in the National Capital Region will be held at Centre des Conferences/Conference Center, Phase 4, 140 Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec.

The Committee has for now decided to hold public meetings in two northern communities. The first public meeting will take place in Baker Lake, N.W.T. on Thursday, 28 February 1980 at the Resources Center commencing 10:00 A.M. The second public meeting will take place in Whitehorse, Yukon on Saturday 1 March 1980 at the Travelodge Hotel, 2nd Avenue and Woods Street, commencing 10:00 A.M.

Members of the general public and interested parties who wish to present submissions or comments at either of these two public meetings should register with the Secretary at least one hour before the meeting starts. Copies of the January 8th Announcement which outlines the issues under discussion will soon be available at the Hamlet Council Office in Baker Lake and at the Chamber of Commerce Office, 302 Steele Street, Whitehorse.

Kramer, Jazz vie for Oscars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kramer vs. Kramer, the story of a father's legal battle to keep his son, and All That Jazz, a musical based on the life of choreographer Bob Fosse, each captured nine Academy Awards nominations Monday.

Breaking Away, with a total of four nominations, and Norma Rae are also in the running.

Dustin Hoffman was nominated for his performance as the confused divorced father in Kramer vs. Kramer, along with Jack Lemmon (The China Syndrome), Al Pacino (...And Justice for All), Roy Scheider (All That Jazz) and Peter Sellers (Being There).

It was Lemmon's fifth nomination, Hoffman and Pacino's fourth, and Sellers' second.

Nominated for best actress were Sally Field (Norma Rae) Jill Clayburgh (Starting Over), Jane Fonda (The China Symdrome), Marsha Mason (Chapter Two) and Bette Midler (The Rose).

Miss Fonda won Oscars twice before as best actress, while the nominations are firsts for Miss Midler, a singer whose loose portrayal of rock star Janis Joplin in The Rose was her movie debut, and Miss Field, once television's Flying Nun.

Nominated for best director were Bob Fosse (All That Jazz), Francis Ford Coppola (Apocalypse Now), Peter Yates (Breaking Away), Robert Benton (Kramer vs. Kramer) and Edouard Molinaro (La Cage aux Folles).

MOMMA

Helen Chesnut's Garden Notes

One of the more basic gardening operations is that of starting seeds indoors to get a head start on the garden. It's an activity many green thumb enthusiasts around Victoria get into well before spring arrives, officially or in reality.

It's the time of year when my husband and children come to expect fewer fresh dinner rolls being produced from our own kitchen and a little less time spent tidying by that mysterious picker-upper known around our house as mom.

Any container around the house may be used to sow seeds in just so long as it is at least three inches deep —plastic bottles cut down, foil containers, flower pots, wooden boxes or whatever. There should be holes in the bottom, or at least some gravel or stones in the bottom for good drainage.

Smaller containers can be filled with soil, planted with seeds and set in a larger container with a layer of dampened peat. This setup helps the moisture retention problem, as the seed beds must never be allowed to dry out; nor should they be too wet. Jiffy peat pots are ideal set in a container with peat so they can be watered from the bottom.

Though most professionals start their seedlings in some soil substitute like terralite and then transplant the tiny seedlings into soil, many people find this is a bit of a chore and instead plant the seeds directly into jiffy pots, about three to an individual pot, thinning them to one to a pot later on.

The best sort of soil I have found for this purpose is soil that is a little on the sandy side. If you buy potting soil, read the fine print on the bag to make sure the soil is free of fertilizer that will burn your seedlings, or some other chemical.

If your seedlings are in soil, they will not need any fertilizer for some weeks and then the dosage will be only a very weak one.

Very tiny seeds like the petunia are simply pressed into the soil while larger ones are planted three times as deep as the diameter of the seed, slightly deeper in very light soils. If you're planting in a flat, space the seeds about two inches apart.

Gently firm the soil on the seeds to ensure good soil contact. The soil should be fairly moist when the seeds are sown and you should allow any excess water to drain away before planting.

Overhead watering of your seedlings is to be avoided, especially during the germinating process and while the seedlings are very tiny. Instead, sink the containers in water until the surface soil is damp, then remove and drain.

After sowing, cover the container with some clear plastic but make sure it's raised so ventilation is provided. Sometimes a plastic bag works very neatly, punching a few holes in it to allow the entry of fresh air. Your seeds should be germinated out of bright light.

As soon as the seedlings appear, uncover them and gradually expose them to light, bringing them to strong light as the variety indicates. Very small seedlings will not stand up to bright, direct sunlight, so this process has to be of a gradual nature.

Give the containers a quarter turn each day so the seedlings will not grow crooked. Once they are established, a bright sunny window generally affords the best exposure for healthy, bushy growth.

In reading back over what I've just written, this sounds somewhat authoritative but it's just a very general sort of rundown on the methods that have best suited me over the years. There are other techniques and believe me I learn new ones every year —that's why gardening is a continually interesting exercise.

NOTE: In my Feb. 22 column I recommended the use of Nicotine Sulfate and it has since been brought to my attention that this chemical is no longer recommended for home use due to its toxicity. For aphids on houseplants, first try treating with just soap flakes at eight tablespoons per gallon of water. If the problem persists, try rotenone or pyrethrum according to label directions, or Safer's Insecticidal Soap at 6½ tablespoons per gallon of water.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — It seems to me that the CBS Television Network made a grievous mistake when it announced that Dan Rather would succeed Walter Cronkite as King of the Evening News.

With all due respect to Mr. Rather, for whom I have nothing but admiration, I believe that the question of Cronkite's successor was far too serious a matter to be left to the network generals.

The American people should have been given the opportunity to vote for the person they preferred to take the seat of the most trusted man in America.

A TV anchorman holds one of the most delicate and powerful positions in any country. Every nation chooses one differently. In England when a BBC anchorperson abdicates, the title is passed on to the eldest son. If the anchorman has no children, it goes to the nearest blood relative.

In Rome, the Italians choose one differently. The head of Italian television calls together the College of Commentators, who meet secretly in a studio in the basement and cast their ballots. When white smoke pours out of the TV station's tower, the millions of people in the square start screaming, Viva il presentatore, and the new anchorman is carried in his glass news booth through the streets of the city.

Soviet television never announces in advance when it is changing its anchorman. The only way people know is when they turn on their sets for the 7 o'clock news and see a new face on the screen. No mention is made about what happened to the previous anchorman, and nobody in his right mind would dare ask.

But in the United States, we do not have a precedent for choosing a new TV anchorman. The reason for this is that no one, including the founding fathers, ever imagined that anyone but Walter Cronkite would give the country its news.

Since the position of the CBS anchorman has now become the highest office in the land, the only democratic way of selecting Cronkite's successor would have been to allow those seeking the job to run for it in a nationwide election.

CBS could have easily done this by holding primaries in each state and whittling down the candidates until there were only two left by November.

The candidates should have been given free time to allow the American people an opportunity to decide who was best fitted to bring them the grim tidings of the day. They should have been tested in the public arena as to how they would handle the news of wars, pestilence and inflation. They should have been evaluated by the TV viewers to see if they had the moral and physical strength to tell it straight without regard to personal prejudices and special interests.

And, finally, they should have been required to debate each other so that the public could judge how they compared with Cronkite for grace and serenity under pressure.

The people, not CBS, should have been the ones to determine which anchorman they would trust to have his finger on the control room button.

I am not saying that Dan Rather will not be a worthy successor to Cronkite. All I'm claiming is that, under our system of government, the selection of a TV anchorman should be decided by ALL the people.

U.S. presidents may tell you the truth—or they may not, depending on how the political winds are blowing. But the man who anchors the CBS evening news is the only one required under oath to swear to the American people every night, And that's the way it is.

Sydney Harris

One of the great unsolved paradoxes of travel is that nearly everyone who visits an area — say Europe, or Hawaii — asks for a list of places uncluttered by tourists, not realizing that every other tourist has much the same list.

I recall, many years ago, my old friend Lawrence Martin and his wife Sylvia wrote their Standard Guide to Mexico and the Caribbean, which was widely praised by critics and travel editors for offering a fresh itinerary of unspoiled and charming spots in that area.

Not long afterwards, I received a letter from Martin sadly informing me that most of those delightful and obscure places had already been overrun by tourists who had read the book and hastened there.

Once, as a young reporter, I wrote a laudatory feature article about an authentic Hungarian restaurant and nightclub in London that was barely able to meet its rent. The piece attracted so much new business that the owner expanded quarters, redecorated, hired a larger band — and utterly ruined the atmosphere that I had recommended.

Acapulco is long gone, because of this. The French Riviera is a travesty of what it was. Cape Cod has turned into a shambles, and Martha's Vineyard may be the next to fall.

How do we resolve this melancholy paradox? If a charming spot is perishing because the hostelries and merchants need more traffic, and if the additional traffic ruins precisely what made it charming in the first place, how do we achieve the optimum between solvency and privacy?

It is much like the circular affair of job-getting, where the young applicant is turned down because he lacks experience, and yet no one is willing to give him the experience that will qualify him for the job.

My own summertime retreat is going through the same pangs and pains right now: the county's population has leapt by more than 20 per cent in the last half-dozen years, most of the increase being attributable to people seeking a haven from urban and industrial life.

Yet, while the merchants and working-people sorely need this injection of new capital and disposable income, the very growth itself threatens those qualities that have made the area attractive to new settlers. Already there is grumbling, even among the natives, that the area is not as good to live in as it used to be, not as safe or as friendly.

Where and how can the line be drawn, and who is to draw it, and will it not be too late by the time it is drawn? The positive feedbacks are fast and easy to see, in terms of higher income; the negative feedbacks take longer to make themselves felt, and sometimes the disease is terminal before the patient has begun to take the first treatment.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — What is there about approaching the half-century mark that results in heart attacks among handsome Hollywood leading men?

There was Errol Flynn, at age 50, going with a massive coronary. Then Ty Power, who was only 44. And now David Janssen, who would have been 49 next March 27.

Errol and David had a lot in common. Both were heavy drinkers and heavy smokers. Neither had a previous history of heart trouble.

But, then, Ty Power was known for the clean life. How do you figure it?

Years go I covered that historic news conference when the head of the American Cancer Society announced the shocking figure about the relationship between cigarette smoking and lung cancer.

After the formal news conference, I had a private chat with the doctor who made the startling announcements. I can't remember his name, but I can tell you exactly what he told me about the relationship between smoking and heart attacks. It so scared me that I quit that day my three-pack-a-day habit and haven't had a cigarette since.

I remember telling David about it the same day as we had a drink in a little bar across from Universal Studios, where he was under contract at the time — for $75 a week.

David laughed and lit another cigarette.

The last time I saw him, a few months ago, he was still smoking. He also told me he had emphysema and was thinking of quitting after all these years.

I couldn't help but think of that when I first heard the news that he had died of a massive heart attack.

End of soapbox.

I first met David in 1952 — again, in a bar near Universal. I was lunching with Mara Corday, also under contract at Universal. Mara, incredibly beautiful in those days, knew David, and he joined us at the table.

We became good friends that day and remained so until he died. When David started to star in Universal movies, he always asked the casting director to give me a part.

One such movie was Dondi, based on a comic strip of the same name. It was probably one of the five worst movies of all time. Invariably, when I would write about David over the years and after he became a major star, I always referred to him as "the star of Dondi."

It would have irked some actors I know, but David, with a great sense of humor, loved it.

It's a lie, says McKitka

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A onetime Social Credit MLA who testified that former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka asked him for $100,000 in exchange for getting a land use contract was lying, McKitka said in B.C. Supreme Court Monday.

McKitka, who is facing nine criminal charges, testified he was not personally involved in any land transactions while he was mayor, and said the accusation by Ray Loewen was made to discredit him politically.

In earlier testimony, Loewen said McKitka had asked him for the $100,000.

"He is a liar," said McKitka.

McKitka, who is currently a Surrey alderman, said he had a legitimate discussion with Loewen about a proposed new development in Surrey, and denied he asked what he would make out of the project.

Instead, McKitka said, Loewen asked him if the former mayor wanted an election camapign contribution. McKitka said he refused the offer.

McKitka also denied he ever attempted to delay Loewen's development project in council.

He agreed that he did mention to Loewen the sum of $100,000, but said the amount referred to a question from Loewen about excavation costs.

McKitka denied he ever received funds other than campaign contributions from local developers.

The counts against McKitka include charges that he breached the trust of his office and demanded benefits for disclosing confidential zoning information to developers. The trial continues.

Vernon hospital to grow

The provincial government has approved construction of a new nursing tower and an extended-care annex for Vernon Jubilee Hospital.

The announcement says the extended care annex will be built on a site now occupied by Dellview Provincial Hospital.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said in a news release acquisition of the Dellview property would give the hospital "many new opportunities to look at treatment options that may not now be in place."

Present plans call for the addition of 113 extended-care and 73 acute-care beds. The government is providing 60 per cent of the cost, and the rest is being picked up by the North Okanagan Regional Hospital District.

Kamloops worker wants leadership of B.C. Tories

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dan Donnelly, a 25-year-old refrigeration technician, announced Monday he would be a candidate to replace retiring provincial Progressive Conservative leader Victor Stephens.

He said the provincial party needed rebuilding and fresh blood, and predicted the Social Credit government was on the verge of collapse.

The Conservatives won no seats in last May's provincial election. Stephens, who had represented Oak Bay in the previous Legislature, suffered defeat. He had been the only member of the party in the Legislature.

Firearms and car seized for refusal to check guns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Americans who refused to give up their firearms to Canadian customs officials Sunday ended up losing the guns and their car as well after a chase through Surrey, south of Vancouver.

Police said the driver of a vehicle bearing California licence plates was asked by customs officials at the Pacific Highway border crossing between B.C. and Washington state to check the weapons and pick them up when he returned to the United States.

Instead, the man drove past the customs officer into Canada. After a brief chase, the driver and his female companion were stopped by RCMP and escorted back to the border, where customs officials seized the car, a loaded rifle and a .22-calibre handgun. The man and woman were sent back to the U.S.

Heart attack before crash?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police believe a 72-year-old woman motorist suffered a fatal heart attack Sunday just before she was involved in a traffic accident on the city's south side.

Police grab LSD

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 16,000 tablets of LSD worth about $80,000 have been seized here, RCMP said Monday.

Police said six persons had been arrested and charged with conspiracy to traffic in LSD as the result of an investigation by the RCMP drug squad and Edmonton police between June and December, 1979.

Police said the drug was transported from California to Vancouver, then passed on to Edmonton for distribution to Toronto.

Charged are William Peter Fleishman, 27, Terry Roderick Smith, 26, and Gilbert Scott Martin, 34, all of Vancouver; Frank Drewniak, 25, and Norman James Johnson, 25, both of Edmonton, and Ronald Gregory Wiggins, 33, of the United States.

Priority for dam

A New Democratic Party MLA said Monday that B.C. Hydro planned a dam on the Nass River within 15 years.

Al Passarell (Atlin) said he had been told the dam was the fifth priority on the crown corporation's list.

He said the dam would produce electricity for export to the U.S., but B.C. residents would foot the bill through Hydro rates.

COURTS

Provincial Court

A 19-year-old man was charged in Victoria provincial court Monday in connection with the Feb. 8 beating and $170 robbery of a taxi driver, whose vehicle was also stolen.

Richard Mauro Valenzuela of 1315 Minto, charged with robbery with violence, was remanded until today for election of trial method and possible bail hearing.

Claus Hellmodt, a 56-year-old driver for Victoria Taxi, suffered a broken nose and cheekbone when he was attacked on Moss Street.

JUDGE HAROLD ALDER denied bail to 51-year-old John Patrick Harris of 69 Menzies, charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and trafficking in marijuana, and remanded him in custody until Friday for election of his trial method.

A 19-YEAR-OLD youth whose 41-year-old father pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of indecently assaulting his 16-year-old daughter, pleaded guilty to committing incest against the same person —his sister— in an entirely unrelated incident.

The younger man pleaded guilty to a Jan. 21 incident in Saanich. His father pleaded guilty to incidents Dec. 8 and 9 aboard his fishing vessel moored at Fisherman's Wharf.

(Both men's names, given in court, are not being published because of this newspaper's policy of protecting the identity of victims of sexual offences where possible.)

Both men have been remanded to March 11 for presentence reports.

ANOTHER 19-year-old, Donald James Jorgensen of 1 Woodville Road, was remanded in custody until today for election and possible bail hearing on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

Jorgensen is charged with eight counts of breaking and entering, three at Cornell Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, 3050 Douglas, on Jan. 10, and Feb. 22 and 24, two at Budget Rent-A-Car, 1721 Island Highway, on Jan. 12 and Feb. 15, and one each at Six Mile Cafe, 490 Island Highway, on Jan. 11, Millstream Shell, 9834 Trans Canada Highway, on Dec. 27, and Mill Bay Pharmacy, on Dec. 27.

He was also charged with possession of stolen autos.

TWO YOUTHS pleaded guilty to public mischief.

Philip Wayne Stone, 20, of 580 Whiteside, was fined $200 for misleading Colwood RCMP in connection with a Jan. 20 accident.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court the accident occurred shortly after midnight at Spencer Road and Trans-Canada Highway. When police arrived, Mulligan said, Stone and another person were standing near a pickup truck which was on its side. Stone insisted that he was the driver, but investigation showed that the other person was.

Stone told the court he was trying to protect the other person, who had a number of outstanding warrants for his arrest.

Cheryl Ann Heglin of 4123 Interurban was given a suspended sentence, six months probation and 50 hours of community service work for reporting a fictitious robbery with threats of violence Feb. 2.

Court was told that Heglin told police a female, whom she named, approached her in the 600-block View and made threats before taking a purse.

Victoria police investigation four days later showed that the person accused was not in the city on the day in question. Heglin then admitted the allegation had been false.

FINED FOR drinking-driving offences were: James Arthur Anderson, 34, of Cowichan Bay, $450; Robert Henry Kitchen, 31, of 6046 Canada Avenue, Duncan, $400; and Michael Douglas Milligan, 21, of 3050 Pickford, $400.

Anderson was also fined $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Socket wrench attack on wife nets jail term

Kenneth Lucas Carter was found guilty Feb. 7 by a jury of intentionally wounding Maureen Carter, 40, during a domestic dispute in a Saanich house April 28.

He was also sentenced to 14 days in jail for common assault against his wife's friend, June Burns, who intervened in the dispute.

Carter must serve two years probation after being released from jail and must not possess any firearm for five years after his release.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan said Carter had committed a violent attack on his wife who was living separately from him in the Burns house.

He said Carter entered the Burns house and either from jealousy or frustration struck his wife a number of times with a socket wrench, breaking her left wrist and one finger and causing bruises and abrasions to her scalp.

"Fortunately, you came to your senses when you saw blood on your wife's hands," said Callaghan.

The judge said it was apparent that in the last few years Carter was under emotional strain from a business failure and discord in his marriage.

"But still, you are not justified in losing your self control," Callaghan said.

While he was impressed with the request by defence counsel Jeff Green for leniency, the punishment must deter not only Carter but others.

In Victoria county court Monday, Charles Michael Verne, 25, was given a nominal one day in jail and fined $500 for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking in Oak Bay on March 17, and Stanley George Robindeau Cardinal, 27, was fined $200 for obtaining an antenna and co-axial cable from Tandy Electronics, 3970 Shelbourne, with a worthless cheque March 7, 1978.

THE ACES® IRA G. CORN, JR.

Many would not succeed in the play of today's deceptive game. However, a good look into the future will tell declarer that a "late" trick astonishingly counts as much as one taken early in the play.

North's raise to four spades is best with his hand even though a no trump contract is impregnable with today's layout. With a trump fit and close to four winners, it usually pays to raise the major suit.

Dummy wins the first trick with the diamond king and leads a trump to his king. East ducks his ace, but wins the trump continuation, West signaling with the eight of hearts. East switches to his singleton heart 10 to West's ace and West leads back the heart queen. Is there any question about what dummy should play?

If dummy's king is played, East ruffs and exits with a club, West's nine forcing dummy's ace. With the diamond queen offside, declarer must lose two hearts, a trump and a club and the game is down one.

The key to success lies in ducking dummy's heart king when West leads the queen of hearts. West's queen will win, but another heart lead will not hurt declarer as he can overruff.

After the crucial duck, declarer can win any return, draw the trumps and discard his losing club on the king of hearts. The defense now gets a spade and two hearts, but they never enjoy a club trick.

When Rose Marie Beretta bought her London Life policy, we thought her dividend this year would be $162. We were wrong.

THE FACT IS ROSE MARIE BERETTA'S DIVIDEND IS $314, ALMOST DOUBLE THE FIGURE WE ILLUSTRATED BACK IN 1958.

That's because our investment returns and claims experience have improved strongly over the years.

So we can return more to our participating policyowners – more in dividends to Canadians than any other insurance company.

In fact, we'll pay about $85 million in dividends this year, the highest amount we've ever paid in a single year.

And that's good news for our customers.

They can use their yearly dividends against policy loans. They can let them grow with us at compound interest. They can apply the dividends to increase their insurance and help offset the effects of inflation. They can put the dividends toward payment of premiums and reduce the out-of-pocket cost.

Of course, the effects of dividend changes are greater on some policies than on others, depending on the age of the customer and how long ago the policy was taken out.

Another thing: the amount of a dividend can't be exactly predicted far into the future and we wouldn't try. Too many variables are involved.

But ask Rose Marie Beretta.

Sometimes it's nice to be wrong.

Cowichan Lodge

Care centre likely ready in October

DUNCAN — Cowichan Lodge, a $3,225,100 intermediate care facility under construction here, could be completed as early as October, says Cowichan Intermediate Care Society president Margaret Robertson.

Mrs. Robertson informed Cowichan Valley Regional District at its recent regular meeting, that there will be no direct costs to the taxpayer, borrowing is done by the society and guaranteed by CMHC, the federal government helps with interest and the provincial government contributes toward maintenance and operation.

Projected cost per day at the 100-bed centre to the patient is expected to be $6.50, with the provincial government paying $22.50 per day.

Capital cost of the structure is $2,132,000 with the total cost estimated at $3,225,100.

THE FOUR-ACRE property between Tzouhalem and Maple Bay roads was purchased at $70,000.

For the convenience of couples and wheelchair patients, some of the 100 bedrooms will be adjoining.

The facility will also have a main lounge, four casual lounges, hobby room, workshop, dining room and all supporting treatment, housekeeping, storage and maintenance.

Mrs. Robertson said all service clubs and organizations have been approached for contributions, in order to keep costs at a minimum for furnishings and other extras.

She thanked the regional district for its great help in administrative support and especially thanked those regional directors who were directly involved from the original conception of this facility and have continued to work towards obtaining it.

MRS. ROBERTSON who is also a North Cowichan alderman, thanked North Cowichan council, in whose municipality the facility is located, for all the help and assistance it had given to the society.

Meanwhile, in other regional board business, Shawnigan-Malahat District Chamber of Commerce president Hunter Smith appeared as a delegation on behalf of Hidden Valley Sawmills' unsuccessful attempts to get regional approval for its log haul-out facility on Mill Bay Road.

At a previous meeting of the board, a motion to proceed toward spot zoning of the area,was defeated.

Smith requested that all directors should give a great deal of thought to such a decision.

He also questioned the comments of director Dick Stephenson, who at the last board meeting had indicated that the owner might have other plans.

"THIS DIRECTOR said he had information, but was not prepared to reveal it. He should have told us what that information was," Smith said.

"The Hidden Valley Sawmills' application must be supported. It would be a great disappointment to us (chamber) if further discussions are not considered favorable by the CVRD.

"There are so many small groups running around with petitions that industry has practically come to a standstill in this area."

Director Stephenson, replying to Smith, said:

"My intent was not inuendo, but the information I had was not public at that time. But the reason I did not reveal the information at that meeting was done in Day's (Hidden Valley Sawmills owner) best interest.

"My information was that the operation would not be a log haul-out, but would involve barges and chipper trucks going through Mill Bay. It would also involve a change in his land-use contract.

"AT THAT time it was not public information and I did not think it in his best interests.

"Discussions are currently continuing with the planning department concerning his proposed changes."

Smith said: "This information should have been considered as new information. But the Hidden Valley Sawmills application was for a log haul-out and no other purpose.

"If our chamber had thought that what was going on there was not proper, we would not have supported it."

The board approved a request from Cobble Hill Water Improvement District that an engineering study be undertaken of the system to ascertain the extent of repair necessary and to consider the establishment of a specified area of the regional district.

The board agreed to support the request on the condition that the improvement district reimburse the regional district for the cost of the study in the event that a specified area is not established.

Sun's lost in the toss

Shannon Carby and Slyvia Clouston did what many do once the weather turns warm and sunny in Greater Victoria. They put on their cutoffs and tossed a frisbee. However, the four-day stretch of sunshine starting Thursday came to an end Monday. Sorry, but it looks like raincoats and brollies until at least Thursday.

Elementary teachers offered honorarium for French skills

Elementary teachers will be paid an "honorarium" of about $5 an hour to take French lessons outside of school hours, the Greater Victoria school board decided Monday.

The honorarium will enable the teachers to gain a knowledge of "basic French," taught in elementary classrooms for about 20 minutes each day, without their having to leave their classes to be taught by substitute teachers.

The honorarium will cost the district no more than it would pay to substitute teachers to handle classrooms while the regular teachers were attending in-service training during school hours, the school board was told. In addition, the educational cost of replacing regular teachers with substitutes will be avoided.

The proposal, partly in response to teachers' concerns about implementation of basic French in the schools, drew fire from one trustee who called it "disgusting."

Teachers are paid good salaries and should insure that their qualifications to teach in the district are up to date, trustee Mark Fisher said.

The proposal could also create a dangerous precedent because of the special treatment accorded to teachers who learn French, trustee Lavinia Greenwood said.

"If I learn French, I get paid. If I want to learn biology, I don't."

While agreeing with Greenwood's concern, trustee John Young said French was a special case, and that most elementary teachers were not aware when they were hired by the district that they would be required to teach French.

School board chairman Carol Pickup said the procedure was the best from the student's point of view.

"As good as our substitutes might be, they do not provide the continuity in the classroom."

The board also approved a number of alternative methods of delivering basic French to elementary classrooms, other than using the regular elementary teacher. School French specialists, regular classroom teachers with French ability, or supernumerary teachers may be used to assist elementary teachers unable to teach basic French.

Esquimalt crushes alderman's call for ward system

An Esquimalt alderman's recommendation for a metropolitan-style government for Greater Victoria was shot down by his own council Monday night.

Alderman after alderman had nothing but criticism for Ald. Larry Mann's recommendation for a ward system metropolitan government. In his "discussion paper" titled Municipal Government for Greater Victoria in the Eighties, Mann argues that a metropolitan government would mean greater savings for taxpayers.

Mayor Ken Hill led off the attack, saying that the municipality was now efficiently run and that taxpayers recognized this.

"Many of our residents have come to me to say 'we don't want it' (a metropolitan council with representation by wards).

"We're happy with what we have," Hill reiterated.

Veteran alderman Jim McEvay questioned whether other councils would go along with such a system.

"Each municipality has reasons for staying the way it now is," he said.

Hill further questioned whether a metropolitan council would be as responsive to the residents as councils are now. Ald. Colin Blair noted that under Mann's scheme, Esquimalt would have only one representative who would be shared with Victoria West.

Ald. Barry Gilbert applauded the cost-saving aspect of the proposal but noted there was no indication that Esquimalt taxpayers favored dropping council just to save money.

Council voted to receive Mann's report with thanks, but took no action upon it. Freshman alderman Darwin Robinson refused to go along with thanking Mann for the report which he, like Hill, felt should have been first released to council before Mann went public with it last week.

In other business, council withdrew its earlier opposition to an application by Paxxon Marketing Corporation to offer its five-unit condominium at 730 Sea Terrace on a time-sharing proposal. The development, straddling the city border, was built under a land-use contract.

Council's change of stance followed legal opinion that its land-use contract with the developer does not necessarily disallow multiple ownership of the units.

Both Ald. Robert Jones and Mann warned that if council did not oppose the shared onwership, it would "open the flood gates" for similar use of other properties in the municipality.

The mayor noted that both Esquimalt and the city solicitor, author of the land-use contract, were doubtful that council could successfully oppose in court the company's proposed use for the building.

Robinson said any court opposition by Esquimalt would be a waste of taxpayers' dollars, particularly as the proposed use for the building would ultimately benefit the tourist industry.

CAR-WARE WATCHDOG ON REPAIR

A watchdog organization called 'CAR-WARE' has been set up to advise B.C.'s automotive repair industry on potential improvements in complaint handling systems, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister James Nielsen said Monday.

The group, made up of ministry officials and representatives of provincial automotive associations, the Consumers' Association of Canada and the Better Business Bureau, will examine recurring patterns of repair complaints and assess unusual cases.

"Specific consumer complaints will continue to be handled by participating organizations and by individual repair shops," Nielsen said. "CAR-WARE's role is not to mediate specific problems; but rather to upgrade the industry as a whole."

Nielsen said automotive problems lead the list of complaint categories on ministry files.

Area school district decides to use own tradesmen more

Its own tradesmen will do a larger proportion of capital projects in the Greater Victoria school district, the school board decided Monday.

The board will directly supervise $2.7 million of the $8.9 million approved for capital works in the district for 1980, departing from a policy of using outside contractors for every capital job over $20,000.

The new policy will mean the hiring of seven full-time staff members for at least two years, and the hiring of about 46 tradesmen for varying lengths of time for the same period.

The policy comes two years after the board laid off 57 non-teaching employees in the winter and spring of 1978. At the time the board was involved in few capital projects and was using public tenders to obtain contracts for most of its capital projects.

Using district employees only for projects of under $20,000 has divided their time between essential maintenance and capital projects, with the result that they have been unable to keep up with the workload in either category, secretary-treasurer Carl Warner said in a report to the board.

Warner concluded that the district does not have the expertise and equipment to become involved in major capital projects worth more than $150,000, or in jobs requiring special equipment or bonding, but that other work can be managed by the board itself.

Trustees were told that the change may result in some savings to the board, and will insure that capital projects can be completed on time without interfering with maintenance work.

Ferry start delayed

FRENCH CREEK — Lasqueti Island residents, who have been waiting a chance to get into town for the last two weeks while the ferry was grounded, are now finally able to get across the strait to French Creek.

The newly-contracted ferry, the Centurion III, was forced to halt operations on its inaugural day on the run earlier this month when steamship inspection officials discovered the vessel had not received its certification to carry-passengers.

Then on Feb. 15, Les Abraham of Western Pacific Ferries, owner of the Centurion, got an interim certificate and service resumed.

Purdy gears huddle to salve arts groups upset with report

Allan Purdy, chairman of the intermunicipal committee's cultural funding subcommittee, is to meet with administrators of the city's cultural organizations who have been upset by the committee's report somewhat critical of many organizations.

Purdy's offer came prior to a special meeting Monday of the Professional Arts Council of Victoria, called to discuss the report.

Purdy and his committee are to meet with the arts administrators Friday in what he expects will be a constructive manner.

The report included the sub-committee's recommended distribution of $226,000 in municipal funds to cultural groups, but it was the report's introduction which caused the most concern among arts groups.

Among the suggestions made were that the intermunicipal council consider withholding grants from some organizations until they improve administratively.

The report also suggests that several smaller arts organizations consider sharing some administrative tasks.

Although the report sparked criticism of Purdy, broaching on the personal, Purdy was applauded Monday at Esquimalt council which had not received the report for his suggestions on cost savings for the arts groups.

His committee's report is to go to the intermunicipal cmmittee next month for consideration and later to individual councils for grant approval.

Western premiers talks set

EDMONTON (CP) — The premiers of the four Western provinces will meet in Lethbridge April 21-23, Dick Johnston, Alberta's intergovernmental affairs minister, said Monday.

He said Premier Peter Lougheed will act as chairman of this year's conference.

Johnston said in addition to the usual topics of grain handling and transportation, Western representation in the federal government and the Quebec sovereignty-association referendum will also be discussed.

The Liberals won a majority in the Feb. 18 election but only two Western Liberals, both in Manitoba, were elected.

Rusty water woes still dog Oak Bay

Rusty water coming from a main on Burdick between Mayhew and Musgrave in Oak Bay has been bothering residents of the block for more than a year.

A petition signed by 13 residents presented to council Monday night said their troubles all started during a mains flushing operation Jan. 22 and 23, 1979.

Ronald and Linda McMicking, 2624 Burdick, appeared before council to press the petition.

Mrs. McMicking said the rusty water had ruined her washing machine, discolored clothes, toilet tanks had to be cleaned of sediment several times, and neighbors had been forced to have baths refinished.

Mayor Douglas Watts, a member of last year's works committee, asked whether a request that filters be placed on complainants' entry mains had been carried out.

"We don't want to trot out vast amounts of mains to fix what might be one or two individuals' problem," he said.

However, McMicking said everybody on the block was affected to the same degree and he was puzzled that this had not been passed onto council by staff.

He said a cost of $6,000, estimated by municipal administrator James Craven, did not seem an exorbitant amount for the municipality to bear to correct the problem.

The matter was referred to council's works committee after Ald. Peter Bunn said the committee would need an engineering report with definite recommendations at its next meeting.

"It's quite intolerable for these people to have to put up with this thing for so long," he said.

Down with polls, says McKinnon

Popularity polls should be banned during elections and Gallup should apologize to the Canadian people for being so far off the mark in predicting the outcome of last week's federal election, says Victoria Progressive Conservative MP Allan McKinnon.

He said he was not embarking on a one-man campaign to ban polls, but would support a bill expected to be introduced by a Tory MP in the next session of Parliament.

"These polls can have tremedous flaws and an effect on swing voters. They can also affect the outcome of an election," he said. "A lot of people just want to cast winning votes, and the polls are detrimental in this regard."

The final Gallup, which polled more than 2,000 voters during the week before the Feb. 18 election, showed the Liberal party with a lead of about 20 percentage points over the Conservatives.

The voting results showed the Liberals captured 43.9 per cent of the popular vote, compared with 33 per cent for the Tories and 19.8 per cent for the New Democratic Party.

McKinnon said the last CTV network poll of the campaign was almost right on in predicting the popular vote, "but the CBC poll (which said the Liberals were ahead in B.C.) was the worst of the lot."

British union expels 600

LONDON (AP) — Union leaders angered by a rebellion against Britain's 54-day-old national steel strike expelled 600 members Monday. Another 3,000 union rebels dealt the strike a severe setback by returning to work at two of Britain's biggest privately-owned steel companies.

Leaders of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation revoked union membership for employees of the privately-owned Sheerness Steel company because they had refused to join the job action. The plant, on England's southeastern coast near London, has continued to operate during the wage dispute despite picketing.

"We are very concerned about the position at Sheerness," said union General-Secretary Bill Sirs in announcing the expulsions. He told reporters the members were thrown out of the union for trying to persuade other workers at private steel mills to disobey the strike call.

The 3,000 union members who broke strike ranks Monday work at Hadfields in Sheffield, a major northern England steel town, and Round Oak in the Midlands.

50-seat test for parties gains ear of Trudeau

CP

Broadbent . . . ineffective in West

OTTAWA (UPC) — NDP leader Ed Broadbent proposed a partial system of proportional representation Monday to add 50 members to the House of Commons and give political parties representatives in areas where they were all but shut out in last week's general election.

Broadbent suggested the plan be tried as an experiment during the current Parliament, and said it could be extended to add 100 extra members to the House in the future.

The NDP leader put the proposal to Prime Minister Joe Clark and Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau late last week. He said Trudeau reacted "quite sympathetically," but Clark rejected it.

However, senior Liberal aides said the idea had been rejected by the party. "It is going to be business as usual," one aide said.

Last Monday, the Liberals won only two seats west of Ontario, the Conservatives elected only one member in Quebec and the NDP was shut out east of Ontario.

"THERE IS now no one party representing all areas of the country," Broadbent said, "and during the next several years, there will be serious politicial consequences when the Liberal government makes crucial decisions and there is ineffective representation from Western Canada."

Under Broadbent's scheme, outlined at his first news conference since the election, each party would submit a list of candidates for the seats available through proportional representation. There would be separate lists for each of five economic areas with a total of 10 seats each—Atlantic Canada, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia.

A party drawing 40 per cent of the popular vote in a region would gain four of the region's 10 proportional representation seats. A party winning 20 per cent of the popular vote, generally not enough to elect any members in ridings, would win two seats in a region under Broadbent's plan.

The NDP prepared a table showing what the results would have been on last weeks' election results had 50 prop-rep seats been added.

THE LIBERALS would have picked up five seats in a combined B.C.-Prairies region, four in Ontario, seven in Quebec and four in Atlantic Canada.

The Conservatives would gave gained nine in B.C. and the Prairies, four in Ontario, two in Quebec and four in the Atlantic; the NDP six in B.C. and the Prairies, three in Ontario, one in Quebec and two in the Atlantic.

That adds up to a total of 51 seats. Broadbent said the discrepancy resulted from rounding off the figures; in practice, the total would be 50.

Broadbent met privately for more than an hour with Trudeau Friday, and said Monday that the Liberal leader treated his proposal "quite sympathetically."

HE HOPED that Clark would change his mind after consulting his caucus.

The 50 special MPs would attend committee meetings, participate in debates, vote in the House, and receive the basic $44,000-a-year salary—but they would not represent constituents.

Equal pay settlement a landmark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Human Rights Commission announced Monday a landmark settlement with the federal government that increases the wages of six female penitentiary nurses to match higher pay received by their male colleagues.

Under the settlement, three women employed at the Springhill penitentiary in Nova Scotia and three at the Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick get wage increases that put them on a par with male health technicians who have been doing the same work but getting higher pay since the early 70s.

The six women also get almost two years' back pay to make up for the difference dating to April, 1978, when their union first sought equal pay for them.

In addition, treasury board—the federal government's payroll department—has agreed to review salary differences among health workers in other penitentiaries and to adjust them if they exist as a result of sexual discrmination.

Rita Cadieux, deputy chief commissioner of the human rights commission, described the settlement as a precedent that should stimulate complaints from other unfairly-paid women and smooth the way for eventual equality in wage payments by the federal government and employers under federal jurisdiction.

"For us it's important because we have made the act work once and can make it work many other times," said Cadieux, referring to the Human Rights Act which prohibits federal employers from paying people different wages if they are doing work of equal value.

Leona Mollis, the 37-year-old nurse at Springhill who lodged the complaint about the pay scales, is barely satisfied with the settlement and regards it as just the tip of an iceberg.

"It's not a huge victory although it's about what we expected," she said in a telephone interview.

"They owe us a lot more if you want my honest opinion."

Ms. Mollis is at the top of the wage scale so she will get $1,054.29 in a lump sum for back pay and her annual salary will rise to the top male rate of $17,298 from the top female rate of $16,300.

Nurses at the minimum rate will get a lump sun of $2,112.28 to close the gap between the minimum sale rate of $16,141 and the minimum female rate of $14,286.

The male and female groups each are represented

AGENTS SUFFER

Motorists shocked at rate hike

Second of three parts

by RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

Not that the increases—ranging up to $50—weren't forecast, but it sometimes takes personal experience before the message gets through.

Friday is the deadline for Autoplan insurance renewal for most of the 1.7 million drivers in the province and insurance agents are bearing the brunt of complaints and long faces over the size of the premiums.

The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, which is trying to cast itself as the friendly monopoly, gave plenty of warning that rates in Victoria would be higher this year.

ICBC's president and chief executive officer, Robbie Sherrell, made special trips to Victoria late last year for press conferences to break the bad news.

It all has to do with its F.A.I.R. scheme (fundamental auto insurance rating) which equalizes rates around the province, removes discrimination on the grounds of sex and marital status, and generally gives the male driver under 25 a better deal.

Previously, Victoria drivers had the lowest premium rating in the province and paid on average $170 for their policies as against the B.C. average of $225. But removal of geographic factors alone means another $19 on the bill this year.

And that's not all.

There is bad news for owners of foreign imports and auto owners who use their vehicle for business purposes.

Most imported vehicles have been upped a group rating because of the expense of spare parts and the instability of the Canadian dollar. Whichever way you look at it, the end result is a bigger premium.

However, owners of some North American models, particularly older models previously clobbered by a high rate group, have dropped a rating and won't have to pay quite as much this year.

Business vehicle operators will also have to pay more this time round.

Chris Burke, manager of McTavish Insurance, provided the following examples of just how much more motorists can expect to pay in 1980.

Western Grits sounded out

The two Liberal MPs elected in Western Canada—both from Manitoba—have sounded out their party's views in B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan to discuss Western representation in the new federal cabinet.

In Edmonton, Alberta Liberals met Lloyd Axworthy, elected in Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

One of the questions was expected to be the possibility of appointing an Alberta Liberal senator to the cabinet.

Branny Schepanovich, Alberta's federal Liberal organizer, said Alberta Liberals would be advising Axworthy on provincial representation.

Robert Bockstael, the other elected Western Liberal who represents St. Boniface, met the 14 defeated Saskatchewan Liberal candidates earlier Monday in Regina.

A spokesman said the course Trudeau apparently favored on the advice of former Liberal transport minister Otto Lang would involve asking some Quebec MPs to resign so defeated Western candidates could run in byelections in their ridings.

Tony Merchant, Liberal candidate in Regina East, said if that course was followed, the most likely Saskatchewan candidate to be selected would be Ralph Goodale, who was narrowly defeated in Assiniboia.

A second course that candidates were told Trudeau also favors is the appointment of Pierre Deniger, MP for the Quebec riding of Laprairie, as grains minister. Merchant said Saskatchewan candidates oppose the

UN probers meet jurists

United Press International

The UN commission of inquiry met twice with Iranian jurists Monday, and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered a meeting be set up at once between the panel and Iranians allegedly crippled by the ousted shah's secret police.

But Khomeini, viewed by diplomats as the ultimate key to the release of the Americans hostages, said nothing about a meeting between the five-man panel and the 50 Americans who have been held captive at the U.S. embassy for 114 days.

In a statement issued from his office Monday night and reported by Tehran radio monitored in London, Khomeini announced he had instructed the revolution council and the Iranian foreign ministry to arrange "without delay" a meeting between the UN commission and "invalids of the Islamic revolution".

Khomeini, who with his statement injected himself into the work of the commission for the first time, said such a meeting would make the shah's and America's crimes clearer.

He did not spell out what he meant by "invalids," but his statement came at the same time as reports that the UN panel might give a hearing Tuesday to victims of the SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

Despite the hard-line statements of recent days, state department spokesman Hodding Carter cautioned against putting too much weight on any single statement coming from Iranian officials.

"I would remind you that we have seen days when official statements have covered 360 degrees," he said.

His comments indicated the Jimmy Carter administration has not abandoned hopes that the commission of inquiry visiting Iran will eventually lead to the hostages' release.

Hodding Carter would not directly comment on a statement by Khomeini saying there could be no release of the hostages until at least after the election of the Iranian parliament in April.

Soviet tanks roam Kabul

United Press International

Soviet commanders sent tanks through riot-torn and strike-stilled Kabul Monday and a high Afghan diplomat who defected said there was no functioning Afghan government because the Soviets were running every facet of the regime.

Reports in Washington and by well-informed travellers said 500 to 700 Afghanis were killed in four days of anti-Soviet protests.

"I can hardly say there is a national government in Afghanistan," said Rahin Gaporizi, 34, who stunned the diplomatic world Friday when he quit his post at the UN Afghan mission. He made the comment Monday night on the Public Television MacNeil-Lehrer report in New York.

Gaporizi, hinting strongly that he feared for his wife and children still in Afghanistan, would not directly say the Soviets had total control of the government.

But Gaporizi, who talked earlier this month with Soviet foreign policy planners in Moscow, stressed: "I can hardly believe that there is a national government . . . in which Afghans are having the power and the administration of the country."

In Kabul, despite the presence of Soviet tanks and repeated calls by the Kremlin-run Afghan government, shopkeepers kept their doors closed for the fifth straight day, the U.S. state department said.

Soviet armored power enforced a tense calm on riot-torn Kabul Monday but repeated calls by the Afghan government failed to convince merchants who had joined a general strike to reopen their stores.

More than 500 persons were killed in anti-Soviet protests that rocked the ancient capital from Thursday until Sunday, according to one reliable Western traveller who arrived in New Delhi, India, from Kabul and asked not to be identified.

"I've heard from the Afghans that there are 500 dead," he said. "But I'm sure it's more. They said there were thousands wounded. Their estimates are probably 80 per cent correct."

In Washington, the state department said casualties had climbed higher than the previously estimated 500 to 700 people killed or wounded.

New thrust for cancer drug trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Calling the results of tests to date "promising," the American Cancer Society says it is expanding its support for trials of interferon as a potential cancer-fighting drug.

The society announced Monday it would add $3.4 million to the study, more than doubling the number of patients who could be treated. The tests on interferon against human cancer began with the society's $2.4-million grant two years ago.

Dr. Saul Gusberg of Mount Sinai School of Medicine, the society's national president, said Monday that more research was needed to prove whether interferon was useful in treating cancer. He said results of the test so far were "promising."

The trials, taking place at 10 U.S. medical centres, use daily doses on 150 patients with either melanoma (a skin cancer), multiple myeloma (a bone marrow cancer), breast cancer or non-Hodgkin's lymphoma (a lymph-system cancer).

Interferon (pronounced like "interfere") was discovered in 1957 as a potent natural substance that helps cells fight off virus infection.

In recent years, experimenters have found that it also seems to help protect animals against some kinds of cancer, and may do the same for humans. It is less toxic than most anti-cancer drugs and works by a different, though still unknown, mechanism.

It is also one of the world's costliest drugs—$150 for a daily dose and $30,000 or more for a course of treatment.

"The unprecedented size of the society's appropriations for interferon is due to the very high cost of the material," Gusberg said. "There is little expectation that much less expensive material will become available in less than two to three years."

Part of the cancer society grant will help set up U.S. sources. Several organizations plan to produce interferon from white blood cells, and others hope to make it from rapidly growing cell cultures or from bacteria that have been genetically manipulated, the last a recent breakthrough.

"As people need and want more, the cost hopefully will come down some," said Dr. Jordan Gutterman of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Tex., chairman of the study. "With the $2.4 million, we were able to treat about 150 patients. I would hope that we could double that (with the new appropriation)."

But Gutterman said that the medical centres now involved in the trial still had not received enough interferon to treat all 150 patients, and no new patients would be added until 1981 or 1982.

Sore over pay, sergeants seize Surinam

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — Army sergeants disgruntled over pay and working conditions seized power in this small South American state Monday, striking swiftly behind a gunboat barrage in a pre-dawn coup. Local reporters said up to 15 persons were killed in the shelling and gunfights.

The rebels issued a statement saying they would abide by the democratic principles of this former Dutch colony, which has a population of 450,000 people.

The whereabouts of Prime Minister Henck Arron, leader of the moderate National party, and most of his cabinet ministers could not be determined immediately. One report said that Arron fled to Paranam, 32 kilometres south of the capital.

Attorney-General Maurice de Miranda was reported wounded in the side and undergoing surgery at a hospital.

Radio stations broadcast the statement issued by the sergeants' National Military Council. It said the army commander-in-chief and the justice minister had been taken into custody by the insurgents. The council's statement also announced a curfew from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. and placed the one government and three private radio stations under censorship.

The early-morning coup in this sleepy tropical capital climaxed a year of growing tension between the Arron government and the non-commissioned officers.

Surinam is sandwiched between Guyana and French Guiana on the northeastern shoulder of South America. Most Surinamese live in the coastal area—Paramaribo is 24 kilometres upriver from the Atlantic—and the dense interior jungle remains a forbidding barrier to settlement.

Opposes Carter view

Kennedy bucks north pipeline

SEATTLE (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said Monday he opposed construction of an oil pipeline from Washington state to Minnesota and would rather see an all-land route to transport Alaskan oil to the U.S. Mid-West.

Kennedy's position is in direct conflict with that of President Carter, who has endorsed the Northern Tier pipeline proposal to ship oil along the Pacific Coast to a port in Washington state and movement through an all-American pipeline eastward.

"I am opposed to the Northern Tier pipeline because it presents a serious threat to the ecology of Puget Sound," Kennedy said. He was in New Hampshire campaigning for today's Democratic presidential primary.

"The citizens of the state should demand justification for the president's behind-closed-doors decision to take such risks," his statement said.

A Kennedy spokesman added that the decision was made without adequate consultation with people and agencies of the Washington state.

"Accidents are inevitable," Kennedy said. "These accidents would be devastating to Washington's fishing industry and to the unique character of Puget Sound, the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the state's incomparable Pacific Coast beaches."

Kennedy said he continued to support an all-land pipeline to the East, "when sufficient supplies and needs can be proven."

He also said that alternatives to Northern Tier that made use of existing routes were likely to transport oil to the U.S. Midwest more cheaply and more quickly than Northern Tier.

Pierre Trudeau, Liberal party leader and prime minister-designate following last Monday's federal election, has said he would favor an all-land pipeline route through Canada that would largely parallel the Alaska Highway.

A third alternative proposed is to ship the oil by tanker down the coast and then use a system of existing pipelines that would take the oil through Canada.

Reforms cripple Cameroon

DOUALA, Cameroon (UPI) — Thousands of poor people in Zaire have plunged deeper into the abyss of poverty because of an unsuccessful currency reform attempted by the near-bankrupt government, diplomatic and business sources said Monday.

Diplomatic sources label as a failure the effort involving the recall of more than 90 per cent of the nation's currency last December. They say black marketeers and Zaire's privileged elite were saved by corrupt officials.

The latest disaster for Zaire's economy comes as the government of President Mobuto Sese Seko, already scheduled to get $325 million in international aid this year, is seeking another loan from the World Bank to cover a deficit projected at between $350 million and $422 million.

As a requirement for the aid, Mobuto agreed to reforms demanded by the International Monetary Fund, including a more than 80 percent devaluation of the currency in the last 15 months.

But Western businessmen arriving in Cameroon and diplomats said the recall, apparently aimed at cutting the amount of money in circulation to improve the government's financial position, took the IMF by surprise.

Diplomatic sources said many people in rural areas of the sprawling African nation either did not hear about the exchange ordered last Dec. 21 or were unable to reach banks in the few days allowed for exchange.

"Many peasants who had just sold their recently harvested crops for cash were reportedly wiped out" financially, diplomats said.

Daring grab in Rome

ROME (AP) - A daring gang posing as railway workers pounced on two guards of a Brinks subsidiary taking a payroll inside the Italian transportation ministry here Monday and escaped through a lavatory window with an estimated $840,000, police reported.

A caller to an Italian news agency claimed the robbery was staged by the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist gang.

Investigators were uncertain about the authenticity of the claim, but the Red Brigades group has been known to stage bank robberies to finance underground activities. Police also have blamed the Red Brigades for seven of the 12 political assassinations in Italy this year.

Police noted the meticulous planning by at least six persons to gain admission to the guarded ministry building and blend in with several hundred employees waiting for their pay at the ministry bank.

Witnesses said the the gang struck when a transport company's white armored car pulled into the courtyard and two guards carried in two sacks of money.

CHECK THESE NEW BENEFITS AND OPTIONS FOR AUTOPLAN '80

It's getting close to renewal time for Autoplan insurance. The deadline is February 29th for the majority of B.C. motorists. Although rates are up by 10% because of increased costs, individual premiums may increase or decrease because of changes in ICBC's rating structure and the introduction of Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program. Your Autoplan insurance for 1980 also features some new built-in benefits for everyone and some new options you should consider for your personal protection when you renew.

CHANGED COVERAGES

1. INCREASED LIABILITY COVERAGE

Like everything else, the cost of settling bodily injury claims continues to rise. So, for your greater protection, we have increased the compulsory minimum for Third Party Liability insurance to $100,000 from $75,000. For the nine out of 10 motorists who carry more than just the minimum coverage, there will be no extra cost.

2. INCREASED NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS

Recognizing the higher cost of living, a number of no-fault accident benefits are being increased.

- Weekly benefits increased to $100 from $75.
- Dependent benefits increased to $25 from $15 a week.
- Funeral expenses increased to $1,000 from $750.

3. SAFE DRIVING VEHICLE DISCOUNT CHANGE

A major change in the discount program came into effect last September. It waives the earlier requirement that drivers in British Columbia had to be insured under Autoplan for six months before they became eligible for a Safe Driving Vehicle Discount. Now, the discount can be applied without the waiting period and it is based on the owner's previous claim record. A one-year claim-free record earns a 15% discount; two years earns 25%; three qualifies for 32½%. This change principally benefits people buying an additional vehicle and new residents to the province.

NEW COVERAGE

INVERSE LIABILITY COVERAGE

In some U.S. states and Canadian provinces, your right to recover costs for damage to your vehicle through the courts is legally prohibited when a resident of that state or province is at fault in the accident. This new Autoplan feature, which is included as part of your basic coverage at no extra cost to you, provides for payment of your collision damage cost to the extent that you are not at fault for the accident.

NEW OPTIONS

1. UNDER INSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE

For an additional premium you can now extend your protection to cover accidents where the insurance of the driver at fault is not sufficient to cover claims for bodily injury and death. If you are the victim of an accident, and you carry this option you are protected to the limit of your own Third Party Liability coverage.

2. SUPPLEMENTARY NO-FAULT ACCIDENT BENEFITS

If you feel the current disability and death benefits offered under the No-Fault Accident Benefits schedule are insufficient to cover your needs, this option allows you to buy a higher level of benefits for an additional premium.

AND THE F.A.I.R. PROGRAM STARTS

Autoplan '80 will also introduce Phase I of the F.A.I.R. program. The premium you pay may be affected by one or more of these changes:

- Sex and marital status will be removed as rating factors. This will mean a decrease of about 30% in the average premium paid by male vehicle owners or principal operators under 30 years of age.
- The first step will be taken towards removing geographical location as a rating factor. As a result, premiums will increase in some territories and decrease in others.
- The Safe Driving Incentive Grant will be discontinued because the young, single, male drivers who received this grant will benefit more from the new lower premiums
- An additional premium is no longer required for an occasional operator under 25 years of age.

If you have any questions, consult your independent Autoplan agent, or your Motor Licence Office. Be sure to pick up your Motorist Kit when renewing your insurance. It contains a handy pocket to protect your insurance and registration documents, useful information if you have an accident and details of Autoplan insurance for 1980.

Renew early and take time to discuss the new coverages and your requirements with your agent.

The three-act comedy written by Harry Segall will be staged Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Cowichan Theatre.

Directed by Arlene Blundell of Nanaimo, Heaven Can Wait revolves around the trials and tribulations of Joe Pendelton, a struggling boxer taken before his time by an over-anxious angel on her first day on the job.

There's no doubt about it, this has been a good year for ducks on Vancouver Island. They've been in their element in heavy rains and brief cold spell a few weeks ago hasn't bothered them much. This beautiful wood duck, one of duck family's glamorous members, is one of attractions of Nanaimo's Bowen Park nature centre. Bowen Park is top-notch draw for locals and visitors.

Chamber

Tourist map finally drawn

By DEREK RHIND
Colonist correspondent

DUNCAN — The Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce has succeeded in putting the Chemainus-Crofton area on the map.

Chemainus and Crofton, both lying off the Trans-Canada Highway and both part of North Cowichan municipality, have suffered from being missed by tourists travelling the highway and the lack of recognition by federal and provincial cartographers.

The chamber decided to do something about this and appointed Karl Schutz as map co-ordinator to head a map committee that gathered together the written information, cartographic details and funds, culminating in the successful production of the first tourist map of the area.

The map is printed in four colors, containing histories of the two towns, drawings of local attractions, such as the Chemainus water wheel and street maps indicating locations of local attractions.

Schutz said the layout funds were raised through donations from industry and local merchants. Printing costs will be met through sales of the map, which will be sold for 50 cents each.

He said he would like to see th maps available on B.C. ferries but because of the cost, the chamber must find a sponsor willing to buy the maps and make them available to the travelling public for free.

The map celebration night was held at Rotary-Kin hall at Chemainus and Jordan spoke on the benefits of tourism to the local community.

Schutz said the Chemainus-Crofton chamber not only represents the business interests of the Chemainus and Crofton areas but serves as a focal point for community action, ensuring that the interests of the two communities are brought before North Cowichan council.

Father concerned for children's safety

Crash prompts petition

Colonist correspondent

COOMBS — A spectacular crash on the French Creek Bridge on the Alberni Highway, involving two tractor trailer units, has prompted Ian Terry of Coombs to circulate a petition asking for a separate walkway across the bridge.

Terry has two children in French Creek elementary school. They cross the bridge four times a day and he says he is concerned for children's safety when crossing the bridge.

He said he wants a walkway constructed, separate from the bridge, on the outside of the structural retaining rail, such as on the French Creek bridge on the Island Highway.

Had the accident occurred about two hours earlier, the results could have been tragic, he said, and he stated that in his petition.

His petition to the highways ministry reads:

"We, the parents of children attending French Creek elementary school, are concerned about the safety of the pedestrian walkway on the Alberni highway bridge over French Creek.

"The accident of Feb. 14 involving two large trucks, had it been just a little earlier, could have had a very tragic result. In order to minimize the danger to our children, we request that a separate pedestrian walk be constructed outside of the bridge rail on the south side of the bridge."

A similar petition was circulated several years ago, he said, but it got no results.

Cowichan Lodge

Care facility likely ready this October

DUNCAN — Cowichan Lodge, a $3,225,100 intermediate care facility under construction here, could be completed as early as October, says Cowichan Intermediate Care Society president Margaret Robertson.

Mrs. Robertson informed Cowichan Valley Regional District at its recent regular meeting, that there will be no direct costs to the taxpayer, borrowing is done by the society and guaranteed by CMHC, the federal government helps with interest and the provincial government contributes toward maintenance and operation.

Projected cost per day at the 100-bed centre to the patient is expected to be $6.50, with the provincial government paying $22.50 per day.

Capital cost of the structure is $2,132,000 with the total cost estimated at $3,225,100.

The four-acre property between Tzouhalem and Maple Bay roads was purchased at $70,000.

For the convenience of couples and wheelchair patients, some of the 100 bedrooms will be adjoining.

The facility will also have a main lounge, four casual lounges, hobby room, workshop, dining room and all supporting treatment, housekeeping, storage and maintenance.

Mrs. Robertson said all service clubs and organizations have been approached for contributions, in order to keep costs at a minimum for furnishings and other extras.

She thanked the regional district for its great help in administrative support and especially thanked those regional directors who were directly involved from the original conception of this facility and have continued to work towards obtaining it.

Mrs. Robertson who is also a North Cowichan alderman, thanked North Cowichan council, in whose municipality the facility is located, for all the help and assistance it had given to the society.

Meanwhile, in other regional board business, Shawnigan-Malahat District Chamber of Commerce president Hunter Smith appeared as a delegation on behalf of Hidden Valley Sawmills' unsuccessful attempts to get regional approval for its log haul-out facility on Mill Bay Road.

At a previous meeting of the board, a motion to proceed toward spot zoning of the area,was defeated.

Smith requested that all directors should give a great deal of thought to such a decision.

He also questioned the comments of director Dick Stephenson, who at the last board meeting had indicated that the owner might have other plans.

"This director said he had information, but was not prepared to reveal it. He should have told us what that information was," Smith said.

"The Hidden Valley Sawmills' application must be supported. It would be a great disappointment to us (chamber) if further discussions are not considered favorable by the CVRD.

"There are so many small groups running around with petitions that industry has practically come to a standstill in this area."

Director Stephenson, replying to Smith, said:

"My intent was not inuendo, but the information I had was not public at that time. But the reason I did not reveal the information at that meeting was done in Day's (Hidden Valley Sawmills owner) best interest.

"My information was that the operation would not be a log haul-out, but would involve barges and chipper trucks going through Mill Bay. It would also involve a change in his land-use contract.

"At that time it was not public information and I did not think it in his best interests.

"Discussions are currently continuing with the planning department concerning his proposed changes."

Smith said: "This information should have been considered as new information. But the Hidden Valley Sawmills application was for a log haul-out and no other purpose.

"If our chamber had thought that what was going on there was not proper, we would not have supported it."

The board approved a request from Cobble Hill Water Improvement District that an engineering study be undertaken of the system to ascertain the extent of repair necessary and to consider the establishment of a specified area of the regional district.

The board agreed to support the request on the condition that the improvement district reimburse the regional district for the cost of the study in the event that a specified area is not established.

Hornby Island is goal

COURTENAY — School trustees here have set aside the date of March 5 to travel to Hornby Island.

The school district has a school on the island and from time to time trustees visit to watch classes in session, listen to any complaints and attempt to address them.

This time the trip will take on special significance as trustees will visit Tribune Bay Provincial Park.

Courtenay school district has placed a brief before the ministry of housing, parks and recreation to lease the property as a district outdoor education centre.

The site might also be used by neighboring school districts by arrangement with the Courtenay school board.

The Courtenay school district has an extensive outdoor education program, which includes identification of many species of sea life, hiking, back-packing, canoeing, all planned to include core subjects such as math, English and science.

Late last year a group of teachers presented a slide show to trustees outling the area, showing the many buildings on the property, the proposed or possible uses of the buildings and the many educational projects in which both elementary and secondary students could engage.

In the comprehensive brief submitted by the school board, it was pointed out that acquisition of the park would greatly enhanced the extensive outdoor program already in operation in this district.

Park officials have already met with school district officials and the application is now before the ministry.

Inspection

Ferry's start delayed

FRENCH CREEK — Lasqueti Island residents, who have been waiting a chance to get into town for the last two weeks while the ferry was grounded, are now finally able to get across the strait to French Creek.

The newly-contracted ferry, the Centurion III, was forced to halt operations on its inaugural day on the run earlier this month when steamship inspection officials discovered the vessel had not received its certification to carry passengers.

Then on Feb. 15, Les Abraham of Western Pacific Ferries, owner of the Centurion, got an interim certificate and service resumed.

The Centurion was thoroughly inspected before the certificate was issued. A normal certificate will be issued once the government computers get a chance to process all the information.

The two weeks out of business cost Abrahams and Western Ferries money, though he didn't specify exactly how much.

Abrahams said the Centurion is just a temporary fill-in, as he intends to begin construction soon on a permanent vessel to handle the Lasqueti run.

Abrahams said that "we didn't expect this kind of bureaucratic runaround. We felt our vessel was better than the one which used to be on the run."

Day of grants for Alberni arts

PORT ALBERNI — The Community Arts Council of the Alberni Valley used its February meeting as the occasion to present annual grants to several member groups.

The meeting also took the form of an "open house" for members to view the now-completed renovations of the Rollin Art Centre gallery, now fully painted, draped and carpeted.

The grants, which resulted from a $4,600 grant from the office of the provincial secretary, were made by the honorary patrons of the arts council, Armour Ford and his wife Helen.

There was $250 presented to Arlene Evans of the Alberni Valley Art Group, $400 to Dorothy Allen of the Creative Writers, $650 to Allan Markin of the Portal Players and $700 to Roy Innes of the Orchestra and Choral Society.

The remainder of the provincial funds will be held by the council for use during the year with other programs, awarding of scholarships and grants to artists or other groups asking for funding.

Possibly the biggest news item at the meeting was the confirmation of plans to bring the Vancouver Symphony to Port Alberni June 6.

Correspondence was also received from the Vancouver International Festival for Young People, planning to have some of the major groups performing at this year's Vancouver event in early May tour B.C. after the Vancouver event.

The plans call for a one-day "festival" in each centre visited, with six different performances starting at 11 a.m. in the morning and running through to the evening.

After some discussion, the council directors decided that the $2,100 guarantee for the performers plus the costs of auditorium rental, advertising, etc., was beyond the capability of the council.

Since the event was basically aimed at a school-age audience, it was first suggested that the matter be turned over to the school district, but later it was decided the city parks and recreation commisson was the only body which had the manpower and the facilities for the event, and motion was made to turn the correspondence over to it.

The council also approved the application to the Provincial Youth Employment Program for the hiring of three students for the summer.

Chairman Innes advised that the Rollin Centre was the recipient of a $2,600 bequest from the estate of the late Dorothy White, sister of the late Benjamin Rollin, former owner of the house and property where the centre is located.

A grant $3,000 has also been received through the provincial secretary.

This was in response to a council application for a grant of $7,000 to hire a full-time administrator for the Rollin Centre, Innes explained.

Obviously, he said, the amount of the grant was "grossly insufficient" to hire anyone, least of all a qualified administrator, but the problem remained that the wording under which the grant was received specified the sum was for assistance "toward hiring a professional administrator."

"I believe we might be in trouble if we merely used the money for general administrative purposes," he said. "Obviously the province expects us to generate the additional money needed from other sources."

This generated some discussion as to the standing of the recent requests made by the council to both the city council and the regional district for financial participation through the CAC in the arts and cultural life of the valley.

Innes said that no further word has been received, "but if either or both of them would match this grant, we might be able to see the possibility of getting the administrator we need so badly."

One director remarked that it was "incredible" that the city or region would not finance the salary of a single full-time individual to run the arts programs of the area "when we have bodies tripping over each other to run sports and recreation at the parks and recreation office."

Children and thrift

TEACH IT EARLY, SAY EXPERTS

By J.C. BARDEN
Colonist—N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — At a time when children become brand-name consumers before outgrowing their diapers, many parents are struggling to teach the lessons of thrift and the value of money. The experts advise a twofold approach. Consumer education, they say, should start as soon as children can sit up in a grocery cart and be followed up with a no-strings-attached allowance.

The key to teaching children that money is an economic tool of limited supply is to start the learning process young, according to psychologists and consumer educators with special interests in children. This is particularly important, they say, in an age of pervasive television commercials, early peer pressure and high inflation. What has made the concept of money so hard for children to grasp today is that they are just as likely to see cheques, coupons and credit cards exchanged for goods and services as they are cash.

"IT USED TO BE THAT children could see absolute, concrete examples of how money was acquired and used," said Dr. Alice Honig, associate professor of child development at Syracuse University. "They saw their fathers grow crops, they went with them when they sold the produce and bought goods. But from a child's point of view today, the economy works like magic, with paper and plastic as the wand for toys and clothes."

This us why children need to learn about thrift "at the earliest age," Dr. Honig said.

"Show and talk with your children to let them know that products are chosen for economy," she said. " 'Mommy is buying this soup today because it's on sale. We can have four of these for the same price we would pay for two of these. We are buying this milk because mommy has a coupon that makes it 30 cents less than what it costs normally.' "

A COLLEAGUE OF DR. HONIG, Dr. Margaret Charters, professor of consumer economics, believes that even preschool children should participate in shopping decisions. "Parents should discuss the alternatives with the children," she said. What can we get the most of for our money tonight — hamburger, roast, chicken? This way they will see that there are a small amount of resources, and decisions are to be made about how to use them."

Professionals have a few strict guidelines for parents if an allowance is to be a valuable tool. They say it must be given on a regular basis and that parents have to be specific about what the money is expected to cover — luxury items, leisure-time entertainment, maybe some clothing — but should not tell the children precisely what items to buy.

Dr. Thomas Gordon, a California psychologist who conceived the Parent Effectiveness Training clinics, said the allowance should be started at three or four years old. "Starting the allowance early is important," he said, "so that they can begin to grasp the concept of money — exchanging a quarter for a bar of candy — and assuming the responsibility for pleasures. If they want a candy bar and they don't have any money, they don't get the candy."

FOR THE FIRST FEW YEARS, most of the psychologists and professors agreed, an allowance should be for luxury items only. For many youngsters, it can continue to be for luxuries and leisure-time activities through high school and still be effective. Some parents may want to expand the children's responsibilities as they grow older. This, like the amount, depends on the individual youngster and the family's situation.

What is important, the professionals say, is that the parents sit down with the children and explain what the family's earned income is being used for and how much money is available to the child. Then the allowance should not be supplemented.

"If a child blows his money," Dr. Honig said, "and grandma or grandpa bails him out, or he can play mommy off against daddy for more money, what he's learning is how to con people."

MOST PSYCHOLOGISTS AND educators agree that the allowance should be given as a child's share of the family income, not as something that he must earn by making his bed daily and cleaning his room. He should be doing these chores as a responsible member of the family, they believe, and the allowance should not be withheld if a child fails to do them.

Dr. Chester J. Brodnicki of the nonprofit Child and Family Services Agency of Hartford said: "By taking away a child's allowance, parents are tying his sense of worth to money. But this is easier for most parents than dealing with the issue of the child being a responsible member of the family."

A dissenter is Dr. Salvatore Didato of the nonprofit Family Life Institute of Westchester (N.Y.) "A child should be given an allowance like a reward for cleaning up the room or raking leaves," he said. "If a child does not do this, he should be told about it and corrected. Withholding the allowance or cutting down on it is one way of doing this."

NEARLY ALL OF THE EXPERTS interviewed had children who had been reared early on the economic principles espoused by their parents, and all the parents were pleased with the results. But it is never too late to institute a home course in economics, and necessity can be a good teacher, they said.

An example is Dr. Lilla Lyon, who works in public health in New York City. She was 13 when her parents put her on a strict allowance, including money for her clothes. Two years later, her parents moved to Germany (her father was in the Foreign Service) while she stayed at her boarding school and received a monthly allowance.

A REAL WILD ALTERNATIVE

It's back to jungle

MONTREAL — Leopards, tigers, zebras and reptiles are all threatening to get into the swim of things this year if the fashion dudes have their way.

Slithering and snaking their way along beaches and pools, they offer a wild look alternative to the flora and fauna of the regulars.

Just one of the many swimsuit possibilities in resort collections, animal and reptilian prints are big.

Classic maillots have necklines that dive to a new low and leg lines that curve to the hip bone.

Gals watchout, too. None does anything to correct or camouflage any figure faults. That kind of thinking seems to be the forte of the physical fitness buffs alone.

Montreal designer Michel Robichaud has lots of leopards in his resort and summer swimwear collection for Canadian beach wear.

In the Gottex of Israel collection, zebras and snakes join leopards in the fashion jungle.

The rascally bur in britches of our complacency is back

OTTAWA (CP) — Thirty-odd years ago a group of rascally Toronto entertainers set out to poke fun in skits, songs and dances at Canada's holy establishments—Ottawa, Mounties and Saturday night hockey, for a start.

They sang We All Hate Toronto, and times haven't changed much since. They mocked grand opera in La Traviesti and Canadian ballet's Red Ear of Corn.

They were the Spring Thaw company, and as the years went by they were joined by Dave Broadfoot, Barbara Hamilton, Paul Kligman, Anna Russel, Rich Little, Robert Goulet and others less known.

They began one of the longest-running and fondest-remembered shows in the winter of 1947-48, and through their successors kept it up until 1971. Only the First World War army entertainment troup The Dumbells could top them with the latter's international touring activity.

Now they are returning, with a 5½-week tour starting next month from St. John's, Nfld., to Victoria, via Cold Lake, Alta., and back to the National Arts Centre here in August.

The original Spring Thaw started with the New Play Society in Toronto when it had to put together a show quickly to replace one on its playbill that failed to come together. It became the immediate hit of the season, destined for renewal each year just as spring renews this frozen land.

The late Dora Mavor Moore launched the New Play Society, of which Don Harron has written that it was never quite clear to him whether it was a new society to put on plays, or a society to put on new plays. It did classical and new Canadian works.

But whatever it was, it spawned Spring Thaw, and her son, Mavor took over the direction and acquired rights to the name. One of the country's most versatile men of the theatre, as writer, actor, director, producer and professor, he now is chairman of the federal arts grants agency, the Canada Council.

Spring Thaw, like spring weather, went through many changes of form. But clearly its most successful—and the one being revived—was the satirical topical review.

Through the years, its list of scriptwriters and other contributors read like a Who's Who: Lister Sinclair, Lucio Agostini, Tommy Tweed, Murray Cherkover, Pierre Berton, Godfrey Ridout, Wayne and Shuster, Eric Nicol and Robert Fulford—names now held in such awe by many that they themselves could become targets for Spring Thaw barbs, and may be.

Don Harron, now host of the CBC's morning radio network show, created his Parry Sound farmer, Charlie Farquharson, just to fill in a four-minute gap in the Spring Thaw script one season, and Charlie has been with us in written and spoken words, and in television, ever since.

If Canadians had a reputation among themselves and abroad as being a dour, unfunny lot, they laughed at Spring Thaw and soon found they had a lot to laugh at among themselves. Such a wave of laughter spread across the country that one might well believe, in those days, that a country that laughs together stays together.

Mavor Moore, now on a Canada Council mission to Europe to sign a cultural protocol with Switzerland and find out how Austria subsidizes the high art of Vienna, says he hasn't been directly involved in the new Spring Thaw.

He leased his rights to Allan Gordon, one of the writers of Spring Thaw skits in the 1950s, with confidence that the new company will strive to match the flavor of the old.

SIX IMPORTS TASTED, AND THE WINNER IDENTIFIED EVERY ONE OF THEM

Former Saanich alderman Joseph Bourque tasted the sweet smell of success Saturday when he topped 11 competitors to win the B.C. finals of the Opimian Society's wine-tasting competition.

Bourque successfully identified half a dozen imported wines—French, Italian and one Australian—to win a berth in the Canadian championship in Edmonton later this year.

A CLEAR WINNER in the white table wines competition, Bourque said he owed his success in that category to his wife's liking for white wine.

"I've a wine cellar of 65 dozen wines from pretty well every country in the world," he said in an interview.

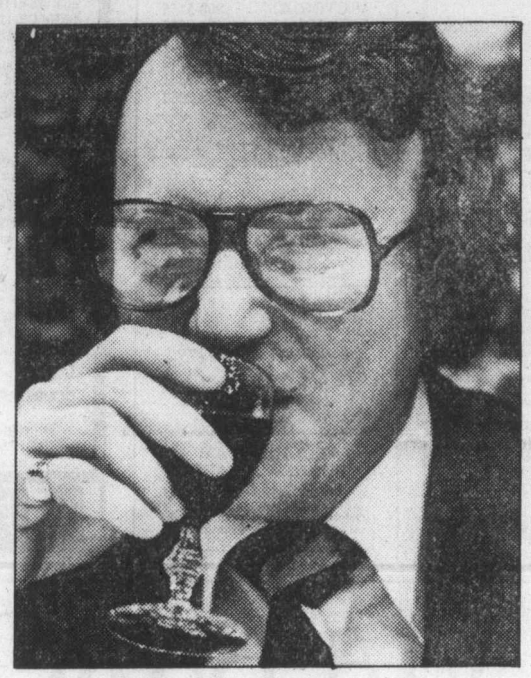
"My wife likes white wine, especially German, that's why I scored so high. I didn't do so well when it came to the red wines," he said with a smile.

HIS LOVE AFFAIR with wines started in 1969 when he worked in a California bank.

"We were giving financial backing to some wineries," he recalled. "The owners would take me out to tour the vineyards and wineries."

He joined the society, which has a Vancouver Island membership of 200, three years ago.

Dr. Robert Malpass of Victoria placed second in the annual event, and William Tucker of Vancouver was third.



Smiling champion Bourque

THREE WHITE and three red wines, their labels covered, were poured into rows of glasses and then, armed with cards supplied by chairman Jay Coulter, the competitors rated the wines according to color, bouquet and taste.

While the wine-tasters were putting their tastebuds to work at Felice's Wharf Street restaurant, similar competitions were taking place in seven other provinces.

NAMED AFTER the Roman consul Lucius Opimius, who was immortalized because he happened to be consul during one of the ancient world's best wine years, 121 B.C., the society is dedicated to obtaining the world's finest and most interesting wines for its members, at good prices.

The society retains the services of one of the 90 Masters of Wine in the world as a consultant. The 8,000 Canadian members give the consultant some direction as to the wines they would like, and he sends samples of some of the best from the selected areas.

The society places an order for a large quantity of the wine, which is then imported and sold to the members through provincial liquor control boards.

The society encourages its members to develop wine cellars so that they can take advantage of the low prices.

'GRANDMA DOESN'T VISIT ANYMORE'

Oldsters applaud bus pass lyrics

The editorial, by Bruce Innes, concerns Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell and his spearheading a committee recommendation that special $5 bus passes for seniors on income supplement programs should be cut off June 1.

The editorial—or "musictorial"—is sung to the accompaniment of a guitar, and goes something like this:

"Grandma doesn't visit anymore. They took away her bus pass; now she's stuck at home for sure. Inflation took the savings she worked so hard for. Grandma doesn't visit anymore.

"Hey there, Mr. Campbell, you better watch your step. There're a lot of old folks out there who still have lots of pep. If you take away their bus passes they might come after you, and who knows what an angry mob of seniors might do."

The song continues with an aside—Innes saying, "Drown ya in Geritol, ya turkey." When broadcast, the word "turkey" is bleeped out.

Innes said Saturday in an interview that the station had received many positive phone calls since the editorial was first broadcast Friday.

Innes said he was astonished at the insensitivity of the proposed move.

"There are lots of grandmas out there relying on buses," he said.

C-FAX plans to run the editorial through next Tuesday.

A 21-year-old woman who got glass in her eye Friday night when someone threw a rock at a B.C. Hydro bus window will be all right.

Esquimalt police had said Friday it was possible that Laureen Wells, 7923 Pelter Place in Central Saanich, could lose the eye. But thanks to some quick medical treatment, that won't happen.

Wells said Saturday in an interview that a doctor took three pieces of glass from her right eye on Friday night. Before the glass was removed, her eye was "frozen" with a solution.

Wells said the doctor told her it was lucky she had been treated right away. If not, the glass could have floated to the middle of her pupil and scratched it, blinding her.

She was wearing a patch over her eye on Saturday and was required to wear it for about 24 hours.

There are still splinters of glass in her eye but the doctor said they will flush out by themselves.

Aside from some irritation in the eye, she felt fine, she said Saturday.

But Wells said she was somewhat angry, and concerned that another such incident could happen again.

Friday's was the third rock-throwing incident involving a bus in the 1400-block Craigflower Road area in the past few months.

"What if it happens to a little baby? Whoever did it thinks it's funny. But it's not funny when it hurts someone," she said.

Police said they want to catch the rock thrower before any more incidents happen. They warned that a conviction for criminal negligence can result in life imprisonment.

Kings Pond proposed as sanctuary

Dedication of Kings Pond as a wildlife sanctuary is being considered by Saanich council, Ald. Sandy Noel said Saturday.

The pond is at the north end of the municipally-owned Cedar Hill golf course.

Noel said that in addition to the dedication, council is studying acquisition of flooded land north of Queensbury that forms part of the pond.

Local biologist Dr. Roy Shepherd, 1287 Queensbury, told council recently that the number of birds visiting the pond had decreased because of a reduction in water levels caused by municipal staff changing water courses on the golf course.

Shepherd said that the pond would be in serious jeopardy if water levels continued to be reduced.

Noel said in an interview that parks administrator Frank Andrews had been instructed to experiment with the pond outlet weir to create a much larger waterfowl habitat.

Success crowns effort of Trillium society

PARKSVILLE — Trillium Extended and Intermediate Care Society's trustees had their years of effort rewarded recently when they accepted the schematic design proposal of their architect Raymond Goldsworthy.

After six years of drumming up local and governmental support for the hospital, the Trillium concept has become concrete, and finalized designs for the extended and intermediate care centre will be in place by June 15, says publicity chief Ed Irving.

Tenders will be called Nov. 1.

One of the goals of the architect and the board of trustees is to maintain the nature of the site located at the end of Pym Road on Despard Avenue.

The structure is intended to blend in with the present surroundings while accommodating the functional requirements of a hospital within a residential area.

Trustee Irving said that "the big idea is to make it as homey as possible." He suggested the facility would likely have a natural finish of wood.

All rooms occupied by patients during the day, including the dining and recreation rooms, will have windows with the intention of creating, ". . . a strong relationship with the out-of-doors."

The hospital will maintain a staff of about 70 persons, some of whom will be skilled or trained workers. The board has already decided to advertise for the services of an administrator.

There will be room for 50 persons in the intermediate care portion of the facility, which is going to be in a separate area from the extended care unit which will be capable of handling 55 persons, according to the schematic proposal.

Another 15 persons will be able to take advantage of the day care area for persons who can manage by themselves but require daily care.

Shared facilities such as the dining rooms, main lounges and main kitchen will separate the care units while providing convenient access from both.

The design provides simple circulation patterns to minimize disorientation and allows spaces for both social interaction and privacy.

The design has also allowed for future health care facilities on the site.

Initiated in 1974, the Trillium Intermediate and Extended Care Society has travelled a long, twisted road to where it is today. Differing proposals, sites and care facilities have been passed but the plan is finally taking form.

As Irving said, "we didn't get down to the bare bones and figures until the last few months."

At a later date a scale model of the facility will be displayed for public examination and comment.

British union expels 600

LONDON (AP) — Union leaders angered by a rebellion against Britain's 54-day-old national steel strike expelled 600 members Monday. Another 3,000 union rebels dealt the strike a severe setback by returning to work at two of Britain's biggest privately-owned steel companies.

Leaders of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation revoked union membership for employees of the privately-owned Sheerness Steel company because they had refused to join the job action. The plant, on England's southeastern coast near London, has continued to operate during the wage dispute despite picketing.

"We are very concerned about the position at Sheerness," said union General-Secretary Bill Sirs in announcing the expulsions. He told reporters the members were thrown out of the union for trying to persuade other workers at private steel mills to disobey the strike call.

The 3,000 union members who broke strike ranks Monday work at Hadfields in Sheffield, a major northern England steel town, and Round Oak in the Midlands.

50-seat test for parties gains ear of Trudeau

Broadbent . . .ineffective in West

OTTAWA (UPC) — NDP leader Ed Broadbent proposed a partial system of proportional representation Monday to add 50 members to the House of Commons and give political parties representatives in areas where they were all but shut out in last week's general election.

Broadbent suggested the plan be tried as an experiment during the current Parliament, and said it could be extended to add 100 extra members to the House in the future.

THE NDP leader put the proposal to Prime Minister Joe Clark and Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau late last week. He said Trudeau reacted "quite sympathetically," but Clark rejected it.

However, senior Liberal aides said the idea had been rejected by the party. "It is going to be business as usual," one aide said.

Last Monday, the Liberals won only two seats west of Ontario, the Conservatives elected only one member in Quebec and the NDP was shut out east of Ontario.

"THERE IS now no one party representing all areas of the country," Broadbent said, "and during the next several years, there will be serious politicial consequences when the Liberal government makes crucial decisions and there is ineffective representation from Western Canada."

Under Broadbent's scheme, outlined at his first news conference since the election, each party would submit a list of candidates for the seats available through proportional representation. There would be separate lists for each of five economic areas with a total of 10 seats each—Atlantic Canada, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia.

A PARTY drawing 40 per cent of the popular vote in a region would gain four of the region's 10 proportional representation seats. A party winning 20 per cent of the popular vote, generally not enough to elect any members in ridings, would win two seats in a region under Broadbent's plan.

The NDP prepared a table showing what the results would have been on last weeks' election results had 50 prop-rep seats been added.

THE LIBERALS would have picked up five seats in a combined B.C.-Prairies region, four in Ontario, seven in Quebec and four in Atlantic Canada.

The Conservatives would gave gained nine in B.C. and the Prairies, four in Ontario, two in Quebec and four in the Atlantic; the NDP six in B.C. and the Prairies, three in Ontario, one in Quebec and two in the Atlantic.

That adds up to a total of 51 seats. Broadbent said the discrepancy resulted from rounding off the figures; in practice, the total would be 50.

Broadbent met privately for more than an hour with Trudeau Friday, and said Monday that the Liberal leader treated his proposal "quite sympathetically.

HE HOPED that Clark would change his mind after consulting his caucus.

The 50 special MPs would attend committee meetings, participate in debates, vote in the House, and receive the basic $44,000-a-year salary—but they would not represent constituents.

Equal pay settlement a landmark

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Human Rights Commission announced Monday a landmark settlement with the federal government that increases the wages of six female penitentiary nurses to match higher pay received by their male colleagues.

Under the settlement, three women employed at the Springhill penitentiary in Nova Scotia and three at the Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick get wage increases that put them on a par with male health technicians who have been doing the same work but getting higher pay since the early 70s.

The six women also get almost two years' back pay to make up for the difference dating to April, 1978, when their union first sought equal pay for them.

In addition, treasury board—the federal government's payroll department—has agreed to review salary differences among health workers in other penitentiaries and to adjust them if they exist as a result of sexual discrmination.

Rita Cadieux, deputy chief commissioner of the human rights commission, described the settlement as a precedent that should stimulate complaints from other unfairly-paid women and smooth the way for eventual equality in wage payments by the federal government and employers under federal jurisdiction.

"For us it's important because we have made the act work once and can make it work many other times," said Cadieux, referring to the Human Rights Act which prohibits federal employers from paying people different wages if they are doing work of equal value.

Leona Mollis, the 37-year-old nurse at Springhill who lodged the complaint about the pay scales, is barely satisfied with the settlement and regards it as just the tip of an iceberg.

"It's not a huge victory although it's about what we expected," she said in a telephone interview.

"They owe us a lot more if you want my honest opinion."

Mollis is at the top of the wage scale so she will get $1,054.29 in a lump sum for back pay and her annual salary will rise to the top male rate of $17,298 from the top female rate of $16,300.

Nurses at the minimum rate will get a lump sun of $2,112.28 to close the gap between the minimum sale rate of $16,141 and the minimum female rate of $14,286.

AGENTS SUFFER

Motorists shocked at rate hike

Second of three parts

by RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

Not that the increases—ranging up to $50—weren't forecast, but it sometimes takes personal experience before the message gets through.

Friday is the deadline for Autoplan insurance renewal for most of the 1.7 million drivers in the province and insurance agents are bearing the brunt of complaints and long faces over the size of the premiums.

The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, which is trying to cast itself as the friendly monopoly, gave plenty of warning that rates in Victoria would be higher this year.

ICBC's president and chief executive officer, Robbie Sherrell, made special trips to Victoria late last year for press conferences to break the bad news.

It all has to do with its F.A.I.R. scheme (fundamental auto insurance rating) which equalizes rates around the province, removes discrimination on the grounds of sex and marital status, and generally gives the male driver under 25 a better deal.

Previously, Victoria drivers had the lowest premium rating in the province and paid on average $170 for their policies as against the B.C. average of $225. But removal of geographic factors alone means another $19 on the bill this year.

And that's not all.

There is bad news for owners of foreign imports and auto owners who use their vehicle for business purposes.

Most imported vehicles have been upped a group rating because of the expense of spare parts and the instability of the Canadian dollar. Whichever way you look at it, the end result is a bigger premium.

However, owners of some North American models, particularly older models previously clobbered by a high rate group, have dropped a rating and won't have to pay quite as much this year.

Business vehicle operators will also have to pay more this time round.

Chris Burke, manager of McTavish Insurance, provided the following examples of just how much more motorists can expect to pay in 1980.

Western Grits sounded out

The two Liberal MPs elected in Western Canada—both from Manitoba—have sounded out their party's views in B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan to discuss Western representation in the new federal cabinet.

In Edmonton, Alberta Liberals met Lloyd Axworthy, elected in Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

One of the questions was expected to be the possibility of appointing an Alberta Liberal senator to the cabinet.

Robert Bockstael, the other elected Western Liberal who represents St. Boniface, met the 14 defeated Saskatchewan Liberal candidates earlier Monday in Regina.

A spokesman said the course Trudeau apparently favored on the advice of former Liberal transport minister Otto Lang would involve asking some Quebec MPs to resign so defeated Western candidates could run in byelections in their ridings.

Tony Merchant, Liberal candidate in Regina East, said if that course was followed, the most likely Saskatchewan candidate to be selected would be Ralph Goodale, who was narrowly defeated in Assiniboia.

A second course that candidates were told Trudeau also favors is the appointment of Pierre Deniger, MP for the Quebec riding of Laprairie, as grains minister. Merchant said Saskatchewan candidates oppose the

UN probers meet jurists

United Press International

The UN commission of inquiry met twice with Iranian jurists Monday, and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered a meeting be set up at once between the panel and Iranians allegedly crippled by the ousted shah's secret police.

But Khomeini, viewed by diplomats as the ultimate key to the release of the Americans hostages, said nothing about a meeting between the five-man panel and the 50 Americans who have been held captive at the U.S. embassy for 114 days.

In a statement issued from his office Monday night and reported by Tehran radio monitored in London, Khomeini announced he had instructed the revolution council and the Iranian foreign ministry to arrange "without delay" a meeting between the UN commission and "invalids of the Islamic revolution".

Khomeini, who with his statement injected himself into the work of the commission for the first time, said such a meeting would make the shah's and America's crimes clearer.

He did not spell out what he meant by "invalids," but his statement came at the same time as reports that the UN panel might give a hearing Tuesday to victims of the SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

Despite the hard-line statements of recent days, state department spokesman Hodding Carter cautioned against putting too much weight on any single statement coming from Iranian officials.

"I would remind you that we have seen days when official statements have covered 360 degrees," he said.

His comments indicated the Jimmy Carter administration has not abandoned hopes that the commission of inquiry visiting Iran will eventually lead to the hostages' release.

Hodding Carter would not directly comment on a statement by Khomeini saying there could be no release of the hostages until at least after the election of the Iranian parliament in April.

Soviet tanks roam Kabul

Soviet commanders sent tanks through riot-torn and strike-stilled Kabul Monday and a high Afghan diplomat who defected said there was no functioning Afghan government because the Soviets were running every facet of the regime.

Reports in Washington and by well-informed travellers said 500 to 700 Afghanis were killed in four days of anti-Soviet protests.

"I can hardly say there is a national government in Afghanistan," said Rahin Gaporizi, 34, who stunned the diplomatic world Friday when he quit his post at the UN Afghan mission. He made the comment Monday night on the Public Television MacNeil-Lehrer report in New York.

Gaporizi, hinting strongly that he feared for his wife and children still in Afghanistan, would not directly say the Soviets had total control of the government.

But Gaporizi, who talked earlier this month with Soviet foreign policy planners in Moscow, stressed: "I can hardly believe that there is a national government . . . in which Afghans are having the power and the administration of the country."

In Kabul, despite the presence of Soviet tanks and repeated calls by the Kremlin-run Afghan government, shopkeepers kept their doors closed for the fifth straight day, the U.S. state department said.

Soviet armored power enforced a tense calm on riot-torn Kabul Monday but repeated calls by the Afghan government failed to convince merchants who had joined a general strike to reopen their stores.

More than 500 persons were killed in anti-Soviet protests that rocked the ancient capital from Thursday until Sunday, according to one reliable Western traveller who arrived in New Delhi, India, from Kabul and asked not to be identified.

"I've heard from the Afghans that there are 500 dead," he said. "But I'm sure it's more. They said there were thousands wounded. Their estimates are probably 80 per cent correct."

In Washington, the state department said casualties had climbed higher than the previously estimated 500 to 700 people killed or wounded.
